13-to-10 Vote For Arming Ships Is Set For Today

Senate Committee Expected to Act; Wider Revision Still Is in Doubt

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Administration leadership last night commanded enough votes to report the President's armed ship bill from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today by a margin of 13 to 10.

Indications were leaders would prefer to confine today's committee action to the armed ship bill, though they were still noncommittal. The test may go beyond their control if independents force a vote now on broader Neutrality Act revision.

Informal polls meanwhile disclosed from 53 to 56 votes for "all out" revision on the Senate floor, supporting evidence that the Administration will seek wide modifications when the bill reaches the Senate.

Vote Is Due Today

The clear committee majority in favor of the armed ship bill crystalized yesterday as four days of closed hearings were concluded and the committee prepared for a vote this morning.

Testimony closed with two opposition spokesmen and four Administration "rebuttal" witnesses, the latter headed by Dr. William Y. Elliott, professor of Government at Harvard University.

A strategy upset in today's committee test might be forced by independent moves for broader action now.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, served notice that lacking an administration move he will seek a vote on amendments striking down sections 2, 3 and 6 of the Neutrality Act.

Compromise In Offing

A compromise set of administration amendments has been prepared by Chairman Tom Connally, but he declined to say whether he will offer them.

On the eve of the vote in the closely divided committee, leaders were playing their cards close to the chest.

They were reported waiting in part on a study by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, former Foreign Relations chairman, on a set of compromise changes suggested by Chairman Connally and Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

With George's support, a bill liberalizing restrictions on ship movements could probably be reported

U. S. Ensign Saves British Seamen In Heavy Sea

London, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—A United States destroyer has picked up the crew of a burning freighter in the North Atlantic, the admiralty said today, revealing what was believed to be the first rescue made by a warship on American patrol duty.

An authoritative source praised bravery of Ensign I. C. Savage, of the destroyer, who dived fully clothed into a heavy sea to save a Negro who was too weak to swim. Savage kept the man afloat for 20 minutes before being hauled to safety.

Two boats were lowered from the stricken ship before the destroyer arrived, but both were picked up, though the Americans had to search six hours for one of them. It was found under the stern of the burning ship with every man asleep, exhausted from trying to quench the fire.

Fish's Aide Indicted for Perjury; Jury Asks Where He Got $12,000

Hill, $2000-a-Year Clerk, Won't Tell About Large Sum

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, yesterday was indicted on two charges of perjury and was denounced by a Government prosecutor in open court as "the Washington keyman of a propaganda machine master-minded by German agents."

Each of the perjury counts would carry a two-to-ten-year prison term, upon conviction.

When Hill, whose salary is $2000 a year, was arraigned it was revealed he had admitted to the grand jury that he has received $12,000 in the last five months, but would not tell, despite jury questioning, where he got the money or what he did with it.

The grand jurors accused Hill of falsely swearing under oath:

1. When he said he had nothing to do with the placing of eight mailbags full of franked envelopes, spirited out of an alleged Nazi propaganda base here, in a storeroom used by Mr. Fish.

2. When he denied he knew George Sylvester Viereck, Hitler's ace propagandist in the United States, and when he denied that he frequently contacted Viereck in the office of the late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

GEORGE HILL

Pleads Not Guilty

Promptly arraigned before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in the District Court, Hill pleaded not guilty. Hill's lawyer, former Representative John J. O'Connor, told the court, "I am here to plead Congressman Fish 'not guilty'" and indicated that the defense would be a claim that Fish is being persecuted.

Testimony That He Didn't Know Nazi Agent Is Revealed

Fish, in a statement to the Associated Press in New York, echoed this theme, saying, "O'Connor probably meant that Hill's indictment was part of the smear campaign against me. I will say that George Hill is 100 per cent O. K., and I'll back George Hill to the limit on anything."

Fish told the House, in a formal speech, the same story about the mail bags that Hill told the grand jury.

Hill's bail was fixed at $5000 and O'Connor said he expected it to be posted by Congressmen today. Hill was released until 10 a. m. today in custody of O'Connor over the protest of Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey.

The grand jury began the German agent investigation on September 16, soon thereafter indicting Frank B. Burch, an Akron, Ohio, lawyer who pleaded guilty to being an unregistered agent of the Reich, was fined $1000 and given probation of an 8 to 24 months prison term. Later the grand jury indicted Viereck, charged that he set up and financed the Make Europe Pay and Islands for War Debts Committees so he could use them to mail out Nazi

Jury Dooms Catoe; Out 18 Minutes

Sex Killer Accepts Verdict Stolidly, Tells His Counsel It's 'Some Break!'

By Robert R. Rand
Post Staff Writer

After being out only 18 minutes yesterday afternoon, a jury of 11 men and 1 woman found Jarvis Theodore Roosevelt Catoe guilty in the first degree of the murder and rape of Mrs. Rose Abramowitz, one of seven women whom the 36-year-old Negro had confessed slaying.

The verdict, read to the court by the jury's foreman, Melvin H. Mandell, 4707 Connecticut Avenue, carries a mandatory death sentence on the first count of the indictment.

Catoe was charged on three separate counts: murder in the perpetration of a rape, premeditated murder, and rape. Justice James W. Morris directed the jurors to find the defendant not guilty on the second count. On the third count, he told them that they could find the defendant not guilty, guilty, or guilty with recommendation of the death penalty.

Killer Takes Fate Calmly

Catoe was expressionless as he faced the jury box and heard his fate pronounced. He was immediately led from the courtroom by bailiffs, and as he passed through the door, he smiled weakly, and muttered to his attorneys, "Some break."

The three-man defense counsel, Walter M. Shea, J. Robert Esher and George Boden, said they would move for a new trial. Three days are given in which to file a motion for a new trial, and five days from the date of judgment to file notice of an appeal. Catoe will probably be sentenced next week.

Barney N. Abramowitz, whose bride of a month, was raped and strangled March 8 in their Sixteenth Street apartment, sat quietly in court as the verdict was read.

Waits for Verdict

The jurors filed out of the courtroom at 2:38 p. m. and returned at 3:16 p. m. Abramowitz remained in his seat near the front of the court while they were out.

When the foreman made his announcement, the husband said to a companion, "Thank God, it's over. Justice has been done, but if only there were some way to stop these terrible crimes before they happen."

He then approached United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, who conducted the prosecution. "Thank you for everything," he told them quietly.

Petain Offers Himself As Hostage; New Peril In South 'Alarms' Reds

Timoshenko Takes Over Budyenny's Armies Fighting to Save Donets Basin

By the Associated Press

The Russians, aided by snow and sleet, appeared to be holding the Germans to gains of no dangerous consequence before Moscow early today but were in great peril in the far south about Rostov, the Don River port at the entrance to the Caucasus.

There, the already far numerically superior invading forces were being hourly strengthened. It was an area of struggle much more important in the long view than that for the capital itself, for the ultimate stakes were not alone the gateway to the Caucasian oil reservoir but control of the Donets and Don River basins, among the most vital of all the surviving war plant areas of European Russia.

Nazis 30 Miles From Don

This morning's Russian communique underlined the growing gravity of this German thrust by reporting heavy fighting about Makeevka, just beyond Stalino—which the Nazis previously had claimed—and only 70 miles to the northwest of Rostov itself. Similar violent action well to the west about Taganrog on the Sea of Azov—30 miles west of Rostov—also was reported.

The same communique announced that new Nazi attacks had been beaten off in unchanged battle areas about Moscow.

It was plain that the Soviet leadership saw the south now as the front of all fronts; that much was suggested by the fact that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, the former commander of the center about Moscow, had been shifted to the Ukraine to replace Marshal Semeon Budyenny and to try to reorganize a sore defensive situation.

Actually a Promotion

Far from being broken, as Axis sources had jubilantly implied, it seemed clear that Timoshenko had been promoted in being removed from a theater now relatively fixed to one where the demands upon command were much greater.

Soviet actions indicated that the possibility of a war much longer than anything that had been contemplated now was seen by the Russians as likely.

Marshal Budyenny and Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, the latter the commander of the northwestern armies about Leningrad, were assigned to raise vast new armies among the millions of Russian men who have yet seen no action; and this challenge was issued to the Germans by the official Soviet spokesman:

"We shall see how long they can last. We can last for years!"

Old Marshal Wins Stay for Hundred French in Slaying Of 2 Nazi Officers

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Vichy, Oct. 24.—Adolf Hitler temporarily halted the slaughter of French hostages today after 50 more were shot at Bordeaux and there were rumors that the aged Marshal Henri Philippe Petain had decided to cross into the occupied zone and offer himself as a hostage to the Germans.

Hitler's intervention gave 100 hostages at least three more days of life. They were to have died today and Monday for the assassinations of Col. Paul Friedrich Holtz, German commander at Nantes, and an unidentified German major at Bordeaux. One hundred hostages have been shot for these assassinations.

British Paratroops Blamed

The 100-for-1 reprisals were said to have caused bitter resentment among the French people. The tension gave rise to many rumors, among them that Petain would offer himself as a hostage if the executions continued, and that British parachutists dropped into Nantes assassinated Holtz. The latter rumor gained credence when the Germans threw a cordon around Nantes to prevent anyone escaping during a manhunt, allegedly for foreign agents.

Members of Petain's entourage declined to comment on the rumor of his decision. Officials disclaimed all knowledge of it.

Petain was reported to have made his decision last night, only a few hours before the midnight deadline for the surrender of the Nantes assassins. Because these assailants had not been captured, a second batch of 50 hostages was to have been shot at Nantes today.

Hitler's eleventh-hour reprieve postponed these executions until sometime after Monday midnight and at the same time delayed the execution of a second group of 50 hostages for the Bordeaux slaying until after Wednesday midnight.

Petain Made Appeal

An official French communique said that Hitler had acted in response to appeals by Petain and Vice Premier Jean Francois Darlan and because the Germans wished to "improve the chances of catching the real guilty parties and thus save French lives."

An authorized French source said that the 50 hostages shot at Bordeaux today, as well as the 50 awaiting execution, were all "hand-picked deGaullist and Communists suspects" and did not include any notable persons. The Nantes hostages were chosen from a concentration camp outside that city.

This source said Gen. Charles de Gaulle's radio appeal from Britain for Frechmen to "stop killing Germans" proved that the assassinations had been committed by his followers.

City Funds Seized

The German base commander at Bordeaux seized ten million francs (normally $200,000) from the treasuries of the city and 15 suburbs and impounded it for the duration of the war as a guarantee against "other hostile acts."

Meantime another execution yesterday, for illegal possession of firearms and explosives, was revealed by the Germans, increasing to 183 the number of Frenchmen executed in occupied France.

Knox Warns Of 'Collision' With Japan

Tokyo Is Showing No Intention of Dropping Expansion, He Asserts

Secretary of the Navy Knox yesterday warned that a "collision" in the Pacific appears to be inevitable.

The situation there is "extremely strained," he told a group of ordnance manufacturers and high Navy officials, since Japan shows no intention of abandoning her policy of forceful expansion.

At the same time, the Secretary declared in an article to appear today in the Army and Navy Journal that "out westward, the Orient is like a vast powder keg—potentially ready to explode with a roar that will be heard all the way across the Pacific." In the article he charges that India and Singapore "may be next on the Axis list."

Knox's warning at the conference, delivered informally but dramatically, in tense manner and determined tone, was the most electrifying of numerous war-bred Governmental activities during the day.

Others included the Maritime Commission's repudiation of its

2-Month-Old Boy Is Kidnaped From Carriage

Fitchburg, Mass., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Two-month-old Kenneth A. McLean, jr., was kidnaped today from his carriage, left on the sidewalk by his mother outside a store.

Spectators gave two versions of the kidnaping. One that a woman drove up in an automobile, took the baby and drove away. The other that a woman pedestrian took the infant.

McLean is a machinist's helper in a defense plant.

Air Associates Walkout Settled By Defense Officials

President Roosevelt last night publicly appealed to John L. Lewis to call off the threatened strike in "captive" coal mines, as Government officials brought about a settlement of the knotty controversy at the Bendix, N. J., plant of Air Associates, Inc.

Mr. Roosevelt directed an appeal to Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, not to permit the 53,000 union members to quit work tomorrow night as scheduled.

At the same time, he asked Lewis and Myron C. Taylor, former board chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, to head up the two sides of a bi-partisan body proposed yesterday by the National Defense Mediation Board as one method of negotiating the dispute. Sole issue of the controversy is the U. M. W. demand for a closed shop in mines owned by steel companies.

Settlement Announced

Only a few hours later, Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson and OPM Director William S. Knudsen announced that, after a six-hour conference in Patterson's office, the board of directors and management of the Air Associates Co. had agreed to accept the Defense Mediation Board's recommendations for ending the Bendix strike.

The striking employes, it was announced, will be returned to the pay roll Monday at their former pay "and will be placed in their former positions as fast possible."

The Mediation Board's chief recommendation was that the striking workers be returned to their jobs

Meeting Tonight

Funds Withheld

EFFORTS TO PROVIDE for defense of Washington against possible armed attack bog down as move to obtain funds proves fruitless. Details on Page 3.

City-Wide Action

Washington citizens tonight will mobilize to formulate specific plans for community protection against attack from the skies.

In all sections of the District, citizens' association groups will hold simultaneous mass meetings beginning at 8. In some instances, organizations in adjacent areas will meet jointly.

At each mass meeting, a deputy air-raid warden and three assistant deputy wardens for the section represented are to be nominated. The nominations are then to be submitted to the Commissioners for approval.

To Name Permanent Heads

From each session also is to come appointment of a permanent civilian defense committee of from 3 to 5 members. It will be the duties of these committees to establish defense zones and sectors and to locate air-raid warden posts in the various areas.

At 8:15 p. m. delegates to the city-wide conferences will hear a 15-minute radio broadcast on special instructions. Participating will be Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, Harry Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Dr. E. D. Harris, president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

6 Army Planes Missing; 5 Die In One Crash

Bomber Hits Peak In California; Three Private Craft Lost

One Army bomber had crashed with a loss of five lives, and nine other planes, six of them Army machines, were missing last night as dispatches brought to the Capital word of a series of mishaps that caused mounting concern in official circles.

A crew of five died in the crash of a B18A bomber on Twin Sisters Peak in the Vaca Mountains, 40 miles northeast of San Francisco, the Associated Press reported.

Five Army planes were unaccounted for after they became lost and scattered in fog from a formation of 19 ships en route from March Field, Calif., to McClellan Field, Sacramento.

Three members of the crew of another bomber, on maneuvers over the Carolinas, bailed out on orders of the pilot when a parachute flare tangled in the tail assembly of the big plane and apparently set it afire. The plane later reached its home

Hundreds Search For Infant Boy, Lost in Woods

Williamsport, Pa., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—A 19-months-old baby boy, dressed only in a sun suit and a yellow sweater, wandered from his home on a nearby mountain side this afternoon. Tonight, as the temperature dropped to 50 degrees, hundreds of volunteer firemen, Boy Scouts and neighbors joined in a search for the missing infant.

Cries of "Joey!" and the barking of searching dogs echoed through the chilly woods and over the streets of South Williamsport, where Joseph Prato, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Prato, was last seen.

The child was two blocks from the Susquehanna River at that time, neighbors reported. He left his home at about 12:30 p. m. The parents searched throughout the afternoon, then called for community aid.

Lights of the hundreds of searchers flashed through mountain thickets without uncovering a sign of the child.

Col. Grant Made Army's First Air Surgeon

The War Department created yesterday the post of air surgeon and immediately named Col. David N. W. Grant, chief of the Air Corps Medical Division, to the position.

The department announcement said that Col. Grant, a native of Richmond, Va., would continue as Air Corps Medical Division chief.

Col. Grant, a graduate of the University of Richmond, entered the Army Medical Corps in 1916.

Destroyer Given To Britain Is Sunk; U. S. Officer Killed

London, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The 1190-ton British destroyer Broadwater, formerly the U. S. S. Mason, has been torpedoed and sunk on escort duty in the North Atlantic, and an American volunteer aboard, Lieut. John S. Parker, of Boston, Mass., has been killed, the British Admiralty announced tonight.

The admiralty also announced that a British submarine in the central Mediterranean had torpedoed and probably sunk an Italian armed merchant cruiser of the 5413-ton Citta di Genoa class.

A brief communique did not mention any survivors from the Broadwater, normal complement of which was about 140 men.

Lieut. Parker, 32, was the first American serving as a British naval officer to lose his life by enemy action.

Films Get Permission To Portray Roosevelt

Hollywood, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—A film studio said today President Roosevelt had granted it permission to portray him as a character in a motion picture.

The President will be characterized in opening and closing sequences of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," a picture based on the life of George M. Cohan. Warner Brothers Studio said it would be the first time the President had been portrayed in a film.

Cameron Shipp, a writer in the studio's publicity department who resembles Mr. Roosevelt, but who never acted on the screen, is being tested for the part. Shipp is from Charlotte, N. C.

'Victory Program'

President Calls Doubled Tank Output First Step in Expansion

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday inferred that the defense agencies had decided to strive for a "Victory program" contemplating approximately doubled military production schedules, and announced, as a first step, a projected increase of about 100 per cent in the present tank program.

The disclosure, made at his regular Friday press conference, began with the announcement that for the last two or three months, studies had been under way looking as far ahead as possible on defense needs. He said the program under consideration, which he described as comprehensive but not all-out, is not yet ready for presentation as a whole, a move which he said will come later.

Meantime, he continued, there are certain items in the program which are of immediate importance and can be started immediately because they are not dependent on whole program.

One item of these, he indicated, is the tank production, on which agreement has been reached for a great increase of production, involving larger output from presently planned facilities, and additional new factories.

The President declined to answer requests for specific figures, stating only that the increased program will call for about twice present schedules, and that many thousands more tanks and the critical ordnance items for them are contemplated.

Asked about OPM Director General Knudsen's recent testimony that a presently planned peak production of 1000 medium tanks would be doubled, the Chief Executive said that the new program was part of Knudsen's testimony but that there was more of it than the production

Happy Landing

Man Sets Record by 5½-Mile Leap Before Opening 'Chute

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 24.—A daring parachutist leaped from a plane at 31,400 feet today, tumbled 5½ miles through space before pulling his ripcord and landed safely.

The jumper, Arthur Starnes, exceeded all known records for free fall.

Russia claimed a record for free fall in 1934 when a man jumped at 26,575 feet and opened his chute 650 feet above the ground, a plunge of 4.9 miles. Russia also claims the altitude record for ordinary jumps—38,713.

"I had only two moments of fear," Starnes panted after landing.

"The first was as I stood in the open door of the plane, weighted down by 85 pounds of equipment, trying to get enough oxygen inside my chamois helmet and wondering if the radio strapped to my hip would clear the door frame.

"I got through that safely by turning sidewise and stepping off into space.

"But the second, more frantic sensation," he said, "was when my goggles frosted up in a cloud bank at 23,000 feet and my body went into a series of violent spins and somersaults.

"I threw my legs far apart and then crossed them alternately. That usually pulls me out of them. But it had no effect this time.

"My head was clear and I began counting to myself. I knew I was falling about 250 feet a second. When almost half a minute had elapsed I felt I must raise my goggles and look at my altimeter."

A stop watch attached to the parachute lines showed the free fall lasted 1 minutes 36 seconds. The average speed of fall was 170 miles an hour and the highest speed attained was 190 miles.

Smashing Into Donets Area, Nazis Say; Stalino Reported Razed by Russians

Soviet Admits Peril; Enemy Claims New Gains at Moscow

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 24.—German troops hammered closer to Moscow tonight across a maze of snow-copped land mines and village street barricades and drove into the rich industrial Donets Basin in the south as Russian losses rose to "numerous millions," German war dispatches said.

Military sources, who yesterday said their troops were within 37 miles of Moscow on the south and southwest, assumed that a decisive hour for the Soviet capital was near, and said the shakeup in the Red command was "a declaration of military bankruptcy."

German reporters, however, told how the Russians were "throwing constantly fresh troops" into the battle for Moscow, and the high command had little to say about the entire front.

Situation Is "Ripening"

The Russians were reported blasting buildings to open firing fields and to destroy cover which might serve the advancing Germans, D. N. B. said.

A spokesman was unable to confirm one report in Berlin that some German tank spearheads were at the outer edge of Moscow.

"The situation on the whole front is ripening," he said.

"Along an active 1200-kilometer front from Lake Ilmen in the north to the Sea of Azov, German forces are in motion, either attacking or pursuing. The front is fluid except at Leningrad, which is in a state of complete siege."

Unfavorable weather hindered but did not check the German drives, he said.

Leningrad Sortie Repulsed

"At this stage a frost or outright winter conditions would help the Germans by hardening the surface for motorized equipment. 'Gen. Winter' no longer is in the Russian service. We don't need him, but we would welcome him."

At Leningrad the Germans said Russian troops under a cover of artificial fog tried to cross the Neva River but were repulsed. This was termed "another strong effort to break out of the Finnish-German ring of encircling weapons."

Dive-bombers constantly were pounding that city and heavy artillery poured shells into the Red fortificatoins, military sources said.

In its slight reference to the Russian front, the high command said that the Spanish "Blue Division" fighting with the Axis' armies had repelled a Soviet counterattack "in the north," inflicting heavy casualties and taking several hundred prisoners.

German planes were credited with sinking a 6,000-ton Russian merchantman in Crimean waters.

Regarding the Donets Basin drive (which the Russians admit is alarming in all sectors,) the Germans had little to say. The authorized commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, merely said "the liberation of the Donets Basin is imminent."

Asked about statements that Soviet industries were being moved to Siberia to continue a long war, the German spokesman said "that's too far away and help expectable from that quarter is too little."

Russian losses up to October 1 were set by D. N. B. at 260 divisions (from 3,900,000 to 4,680,000 men).

(German losses were not mentioned by D. N. B., but a Russian spokesman declared the Germans had lost more men than they lost in the entire World War. That total was 5,989,758 men. Hence the claimed casualties on both sides totaled 10,000,000 men.)

City of 220,000 Left Devastated To Cheat Germans

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Saturday, Oct. 25.—German forces stabbing across the Donets Basin encountered stubbornly resisting Red army defenders yesterday in the vicinity of Makeevka, 10 miles east of the iron-producing center of Stalino and about 70 miles northwest of Rostov, gateway to the Caucasus, the Soviet information bureau announced today.

The communique, broadcast by Tass over the Moscow radio, said another German force farther south was heavily engaged in the direction of Taganrog, port on the Sea of Azov, some 40 miles west of Rostov.

[The official announcement indicated that the fighting had progressed beyond Stalino, the capture of which the Russians have not admitted, although it has been claimed by the Germans.

City Reported Destroyed

[Reports from Zurich quoted an Italian language newspaper correspondent as saying the Russians had completely destroyed Stalino, an industrial city of 222,000 people. The correspondent said the Russians left behind "devastation that cannot be described."]

On the Moscow front, the Russians said fierce German attacks had been repulsed in the Mozhaisk and Maloyaroslavets sectors, 57 miles and 65 miles west and southwest of the capital. Here the Nazis were declared to have lost heavily in men and machines.

In German air attacks yesterday on Moscow itself 20 of the raiders were declared downed near the city.

Soviet Assembling Vast New Citizen Armies

Kuibyshev, Russia Oct. 24 (AP).—The Soviet leadership, acknowledging hard going at the Red center and crisis on the southern flank, began assembling vast new armies today among the Russian millions and thus challenged the invaders to a total struggle of annihilation:

"We shall see how long they can last. We can last for years!"

This was the tactic of Gen. U. S. Grant prepared here in Kuibyshev and in Moscow.

Somewnere back of the swaying lines before Moscow and before Rostov in the far southern Ukraine, the Red marshals, Semeon Budyenny and Klementi Voroshilov, set out to form great, fresh fighting forces.

"In a very short time," S. A. Lozovsky, the official Soviet spokesman, had said in describing Kuibyshev as a visible earnest of the Russian will to fight on to any end, "enormous numbers will be added to the trained men who continue the fight."

On the fronts before Moscow, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's successor, Gen. Gregory K. Zhukov, was struggling with bloody counterattacks to hold the Nazis and while an initial breakthrough was acknowledged in one sector, official press dispatches declared that the Nazi salient was subsequently smashed by Russian tanks.

For the first time, Russian accounts spoke of Finnish and Rumanian troops as fighting alongside the Germans in this theater, apparently serving as reinforcements to fill the widening gaps in the Nazi lines.

In the Ukraine the Germans were acknowledged to have smashed through at one point toward Rostov, which lies on the Don River at the entrance to the Caucasus, but subsequent Nazi charges into New Russian positions were reported to have broken under heavy fire, the Germans being forced to the defensive.

The Soviet position generally in the great showdown for the Donets River basin was summed up by the Communist newspaper, Pravda, as "Alarming in all sectors."

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, who had been shifted from the center to the south, plainly faced a problem no less difficult than the one he had left, for all dispatches emphasized that the invaders were bringing up new troops endlessly. Many points, it was added, were changing hands time and again, and Pravda said that both sides were suffering enormous losses.

Continued heavy fighting about 100 miles below Leningrad, where the Russians were holding a line east of the Volkhov River, also was reported. Pravda asserted that new German thrusts had been smashed with at least 2500 Nazi casualties and that two villages had been regained in Russian counterattacks.

Nazi casualties for all the campaign thus far were put by Lozovsky, the official Soviet spokesman, at a figure equal to imperial Germany's total losses in four years of the World War. (These by official American reckoning totaled 5,989,758 in dead and wounded.)

London, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Britain has sent Turkey a shipment of German airplane motor parts, it was revealed today.

The parts were salvaged from German planes shot down over Britain.

Turkey's air force uses German Heinkel motors and Germany refused to sell the spare parts she had promised the Turks, claiming that they were needed on the Eastern Front. Britain offered to fill the order and was accepted.

Time Bomb Kills 50

Bucharest, Rumania, Oct. 24 (AP).—A time bomb left behind by the Russian forces which abandoned Odessa last week has killed 50 Axis army and navy officers, including a Rumanian general, official military dispatches said tonight.

The Rumanian general officer killed was named Glogojeanu. (Some dispatches identified him as the Rumanian commandant in Odessa.)

Two German naval officers also were among the victims; most of the others were believed to have been Rumanians.

No More for China

Chungking, China, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The Soviet embassy said today that Russia had notified China she was unable to continue war shipments.

The embassy said Soviet supplies had diminished since the start of the Russo-German war and that Russia needed all her material for her fight.

New Food Cut in France

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Oct. 24 (AP).—The government announced drastic new restrictions tonight to meet a growing food shortage, ordering meat rations reduced by one-fourth and delicatessen foods by one-third.

A decree effective tomorrow cuts down the number of meat dishes which may be served in a week from four to three and the number of delicatessen courses from three to two.

French Africa Attacked

Vichy, Oct. 24 (INS).—Three hundred Free French troops have attacked French Somaliland and have driven 80 miles into the East African colony, the Somililand governor advised Vichy today.

They reportedly occupied Dafenaito, 40 miles northwest of Djibouti.

(Authorities in London would neither confirm nor deny the report.)

Vichy, Oct. 24.—The first snow of winter fell on the French central plateau this morning and there were some flakes in Vichy. Simultaneously it was announced that requests for warm clothing are becoming so numerous that only the most urgent can be considered.

Mountbatten Slated For Commodore Rank

London, Oct. 24 (AP).—Capt. Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of King George who two months ago was given command of the aircraft carrier Illustrious at Norfolk, Va., soon will return to take an important appointment which will mean promotion to the rank of commodore, first class, an informed source said today.

Lord Mountbatten has been relieved of command of the Illustrious by Capt. A. G. Talbot.

British King and Queen Greet U. S. Soldiers on R. A. F. Duty

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

A Southern Area of England, Oct. 24.—For the first time in this war the King of England has reviewed United States Army personnel on British soil.

Twenty-five United States Army Signal Corps lieutenants who have come to England as military observers and American civilian technicians were among the many hundreds of R. A. F. men drawn up at this R. A. F. reception center Thursday when King George and Queen Elizabeth reviewed new personnel from the dominions and colonies and the United States.

After the King had spoken to high commissioned officers he walked around in front of an R. A. F. unit and extended his hand to M. C. Vesburgh, a tall, smiling young man from Lapeer, Mich., member of the civilian technical corps.

Queen's Greetings

Behind him walked the Queen, exchanging greetings with the men. All 100 of the CTC's were in blue ground crew uniforms with "U. S. A." embroidered on the left shoulder.

Next the King shook hands with Lieut. Kenneth L. Blaisdell, of Goffstown, N. H., leader of the signal corps officers attending a radio school, who later will be posted to stations of the R. A. F.

Standing at attention next to the signal corps officers were 21 American pilots trained for the R.A.F. in Canada and now awaiting assignments to squadrons. Their leader, Pilot Officer Carl Boddy, of Randall, Kans., assured the king that they were fully trained and ready to fight.

Donald Gill, an American who served in the Navy in the last war, was present to explain the CTC, of which he is commandant to King George.

Chucked Jobs

"Most of us chucked better jobs to join the CTC," he said. "Some of them sold their businesses. "Hey Red," he called to one man, "didn't you sell your business?"

"No, Ive still got it," replied Patrick Charles Henry McDuream, of Galveston, Tex.

Gedney Acquitted In Wife's Death

Ralph Gedney, Washington engineer employed in naval construction work, was aquitted late yesterday at San Juan, Puerto Rico, of a charge of murdering his wife, Virginia, last May 3.

The defense contended that Mrs. Gedney, wife of the lat Maj. Lawrence Fagg, of Washington, died from a fall. The prosecution held death resulted from a blow.

Wednesday night statement that henceforth all aid-to-Russia supplies will move through the Port of Boston, an announcement that was interpreted to mean that the munitions would be carried over the North Atlantic to Archangel, Russia, instead of across the Pacific to Vladivostok.

In addition, President Roosevelt conferred with John D. Biggers, his lend-lease expediter, and there were indications that Biggers would remain here for a time to speed up and regulate the departure of material aid for the British.

"There is quite a lot to be done here," he said, "to make our system thoroughly dependable so they can count on it as to timing as well as to quantity."

Nomura Going Home

In another development affecting the explosive Pacific situation, the Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi, it was reported by the Associated Press, declared that Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese Ambassador here, would return to Tokyo to confer with the new cabinet of Gen. Tojo, reportedly a more militant government than any preceding one in recent Japanese history.

Kaname Wakasugi, the Japanese minister here who has been representing his embassy in discussions with this Government since his return from recent conferences in Tokyo, met with Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, but no word was given as to the outcome. It is understood that the conversations will continue.

Also, it was reported from Shanghai, the American President Lines stopped accepting bookings for passengers sailing from Shanghai, since no further American liners are to call at Shanghai for an indefinite period.

Secretary's Statement

Speaking to the ordnance makers, Knox described conditions in the Orient in these words:

"The situation out in the Far East is extremely strained. We are satisfied in our own minds that the Japanese have no intention of giving up their plans for expansion. If they pursue that course a collision there is inevitable."

Other assertions in his Journal article, prepared as a preliminary to celebration of Navy Day on Monday, included:

"Only a miracle seemingly can prevent a collapse of Russia's organized military strength—and democracies everywhere are praying that this miracle will occur."

"Axis troops are more than a threat in East Africa and on the African shore just across the Atlantic from our own land. And India and Singapore may be next on the Axis list."

"The combat ships of our Navy are now patrolling our waters with orders to sink any Axis ship on sight."

Knox told his conferees he had just been in a conference on British and Russian needs for war materials and that they were needs of the utmost urgency. Emphatically, he declared that "keeping the Russian army fighting is one of the most vitally important things" to be done in the war. Turning out the material to this end, Knox said, is up to the Nation's defense producers.

But delivering them is another matter, and the Secretary conceded difficulties in this regard. He said supplies could be shipped to Archangel and that, in fact, was the best way, although icebreakers are needed to keep the port open in winter and slow progress of cargo ships through the frozen waters make them easy targets for German bombers.

Another route, Knox continued, is the one which has already been used extensively for delivering aviation gasoline and the like to Russia—over the Pacific through narrow straits among the Japanese islands and on to Vladivostok. But Knox said the usefulness of this route has been gravely reduced, if not blacked out entirely, by the threat of an explosion in the Orient.

The third and last alternative is the route to Iranian ports on the Gulf of Persia, Knox said. But that involves a 12,000-mile sea voyage and transportation hardships, including construction of railroad facilities within Iran, he declared.

Knox then dwelt for a moment upon the "fearful pressure we are under right now," and he asked the private manufacturers and navy yard chiefs to strive for even higher achievements in production.

Ship Statement "Inaccurate"

Earlier, the Maritime Commission stated that the announcement issued by it on Wednesday was "inaccurate" and had been "widely misinterpreted."

This had given rise to interpretations that the Pacific route to Vladivostok was being abandoned altogether, possibly because of Far East tension. The White House expressed surprise at the announcement, on the ground that information on the ports from which ships would sail would be of value to Hitler.

The Maritime Commission said yesterday that "defense cargoes will continue to be divided so far as practicable among ports of embarkation."

Secretary of State Hull told reporters yesterday he had not heard of the Maritime Commission order until he read it in the newspapers and therefore it could not have had any connection with foreign policy.

Tokyo Doubts Desire of U. S. For Accord

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Oct. 24.—Domei, Japanese news agency with high connections, quoted "observers" tonight as saying that the trend of Japanese-American relations depends on the sincerity of the United States, but that Japan doubts "very much" whether the United States sincerely wants a settlement.

Domei's observers, quoted in a broadcast commentary, said that the situation had become worse as a result of United States economic pressure on Japan and that the United States must realize the limit to which Japan can make concessions.

Acceptance of Japan's policy of trying to end the war in China and establish an East Asia co-prosperity sphere would be "the most important factor in sweeping away the dark clouds that now hover over Japanese-American relations," the Domei commentary said.

"The Japanese government and people doubt very much whether the United States has a sincere intention to negotiate the subject of Pacific problems in view of the ABCD line (alleged encirclement by the United States, Britain, China and the Netherlands East Indies) against Japan."

"Now is the time for the United States to appreciate Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo's statement in a recent speech that 'Japan rises to her feet to protect herself whenever circumstances arise that menace her existence and sully the honor of the Japanese Empire.'"

The Domei comment came after a government spokesman had said that easing of Japanese-American relations was indicated by the United States decision to send Russia war aid via the northwestern port of Archangel rather than the Pacific port of Vladivostok.

Raids on U. S. Foreseen If It Fights Japan

Rome, Oct. 24 (AP).—Japanese raids on Hawaii, California, the Panama Canal and Alaska were forecast today by the Italian magazine, Oggi, in case of a Japanese-United States war.

"Japan will have immediate Italian and German aid and vice versa," the magazine added.

Oggi asserted that to protect Japan's flanks for an invasion of Singapore, an attack against British, American and Dutch possessions in the Pacific "would have to begin with sudden action against Hongkong and the Philippines, immediately followed by one against Singapore."

"The war would not be limited to the Far East," it went on, "but would reach Hawaii, California, Panama and Alaska, which would become objectives of Japanese raids since the Nipponese have a strong navy and a modern air force."

13-to-10 Vote Forecast for Ship Arming

from the committee by substantially the same margin as the armed ship bill. George is wholeheartedly for the latter, but has withheld judgment on broadening amendments.

Once the armed-ship bill reaches the floor next Monday, the Administration is assured of approximately a 2-to-2 majority for "all out" revision and may prefer a floor test to the closer committee trials.

Definitely awaiting a floor fight was the total repeal plan of Wendell L. Willkie, offered in the Senate by Senators Bridges, of New Hampshire, Gurney of South Dakota, and Austin of Vermont (Republicans).

That amendment may never be submitted to a committee vote, as none of the three sponsors are members. Senator White, of Maine, sole Republican on the committee reportedly for it, indicated he will not present the amendment.

Approval of a single armed ship issue meanwhile appeared certain today by the following 13 to 10 committee vote:

For arming ships—Connally, George, Wagner, Thomas, of Utah; Murray, Pepper, Barkley, Guffey, Glass, Lee, Tunnell (Democrats), and White (Republican).

Against arming ships—Van Nuys, Reynolds, Gillette, and Clark (Democrats), and Johnson, Capper, Vandenberg, Shipstead and Nye (Republicans), and LaFollette (Progressive).

In the committee hearings, Dr. Elliott, a specialist in strategic materials, presented an entirely new plea for the ship-arming bill and other possible changes in the Neutrality Act.

As a matter of national defense, Dr. Elliott argued, the United States must assure itself of a continuing supply of strategic materials not obtainable in this country. To guarantee the supply, Senators said he testified that America should arm her merchantmen and if necessary to obtain materials they should be permitted to travel through combat zones and into belligerent ports. Previous Administration witnesses had championed ship arming purely from the necessity of delivering lend-lease supplies.

Charles G. Fenwick, formerly professor of international law at Bryn Mawr and now American member of the Inter-American Neutrality Commission, told the committee that if Germany wins the war "all of South America will be lost to us."

"The restrictions imposed on American shipping in the Neutrality Act," said Prof. Fenwick, "obstruct both our defense and the successful maintenance of our fundamental foreign policy. We will be gambling dangerously with our national safety if we continue to impose these restrictions on our freedom of action to defend America."

Presenting concluding arguments for the bill were Capt. Edward Macauley, of the Maritime Commission, and Carlton Savage, of the State Department.

Earlier, Prof. Maynard Krueger, of the University of Chicago, and Charles Clayton Morrison, also of Chicago, editor of the Christian Century, concluded two and a half days of opposition testimony against the bill.

Morrison contended modification of the act would have "the moral effect of a declaration of war" and Prof. Krueger, 1940 Vice Presidential candidate on the Socialist ticket, called the ship-arming bill "the method of the Roosevelt Administration to provide shrouds for American seamen."

One "Help Wanted" ad in The Post got splendid results

. . . reports Martin Hughes, of 13th St. N.E.

YOU'D expect it to be pretty difficult to locate job applicants with their own cars. But Martin Hughes hired three on a single day! What's more, he could have had at least three others. How did Mr. Hughes get such splendid response? Simply by placing an ad in The Post's "Help Wanted" columns. The moment his ad appeared he began to receive calls from interested applicants. Then it was easy to pick out just the right men for the job!

Mr. Hughes' experience is similar to scores of others who have used The Post to locate employees. Letters and phone calls are received regularly by the Classified Department testifying to the pulling power of the "Help Wanted" columns. Employers state they prefer to use The Post for finding help over any other newspaper!

Just read these enthusiastic comments from a few recent "Help Wanted" advertisers:

Drum Praises 29th For Part in Games

Only Division To Get Citation; For Difficult March

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Monroe, N. C., Oct. 24.—Of six divisions which took part in the first maneuver under First Army control, the Twenty-ninth alone was lauded tonight by Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, Army commander.

Gen. Drum in a critique of this week's maneuvers of the First Corps against the Second Corps, specifically mentioned the Twenty-ninth for a "difficult night march the night of October 20-21."

The division that night threw forward its Eighty-eighth Brigade 50 miles by the use of every available motor vehicle.

The First Corps, which was so decisively balked by the Second in the first five hours of the maneuver that the problem was changed by Army direction, lost the battle by a reversal of Confederate Gen. Forrest's dictum, Drum said. They "got there last," he declared, "with the least men."

Maj. Gen. Charles F. Thompson, commanding First Corps, revealed his corps started 3½ hours late because "breakfast is my favorite meal." He said his three divisions were held in base camp until 6:30 so the troops could be fed. It was authorized to jump off at 3, two hours before the Second Corps.

Movement of his corps across two bridges over the Catawba River, he said, was further delayed by "confusion" and traffic congestion. The failure, he said, was that of "execution instead of planning."

Greeted by a burst of applause from the audience of 16,000 officers and noncommissioned officers seated in the darkness, Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, commanding the Second Corps, called attention to an "unusual" feature. His corps, he said, "was ready for a concerted attack when the Army order came for defensive action" and corps orders were reversed in the midst of preparations to attack.

A corps order, complete with maps, was captured by the enemy, Gen. Fredendall said, adding that "such loss in the future will lead to discipline of the officer concerned." Despite the astonishing speed with which his corps reached its objective Monday, Gen. Fredendall was critical.

"The Second Corps," he said, "did well Monday, but it did not get off fast enough to suit me."

Gen. Thompson criticized his First Corps for poor traffic control and "daisy picking." This, he explained, was the practice of diverting units for minor operations which did not contribute to the main effort.

The Second Corps, Gen. Drum said in his conclusion of the critique, "with a mission to defend, started out with a solution to attack. That was the solution if it worked; if it failed there was still time to defend."

The First Corps, he said, "had a difficult mission with a river crossing constituting a defile. It waited for breakfast."

Gen. Drum scotched rumors that the First Corps had been moved to "a less comfortable camp" near Kershaw, S. C., while the Second was given a rest in its base camp because of the result of the maneuver. The change in base of the First Corps, he said, was decided on 'six months ago" to put it in position for the forthcoming maneuvers.

On Navy Day

High Justices To Hear Talk By President

Five Supreme Court justices will be among guests who will hear President Roosevelt speak at the Navy Day dinner in the Mayflower Monday night.

Justices Roberts, Byrnes, Frankfurter, Black and Reed have accepted invitations, the District Navy Day Committee announced yesterday.

Tickets for the dinner are still available, the committee said.

The President will speak at 10 p. m., and his address will be broadcast nationally. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Admiral Emery S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, will be other speakers.

Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington Episcopal Cathedral, will deliver the invocation. Admiral Harold Stark, chief of Naval Operations, will speak to the banquet guests by radio from Chicago. Col. William J. Donovan, defense information coordinator, will be toastmaster. Musical selections will be provided by the United States Navy Orchestra.

The diners will sit down to a navy menu of corned beef briskets, navy mulligan, bean soup and beer.

The banquet here will climax a day-long national celebration, highlights of which include a sham battle at Fairlawn Park, Anacostia, D. C., in which parachute troops, marine landing parties and dive bombers will participate.

R.A.F. Pounds Channel Coast Gun Positions

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 24.—The R. A. F. set huge fires which sent flames 100 feet into the air on the French shore tonight at Cap Gris Nez, where German long-range guns are emplaced, shore watchers said.

The attack upon the cross-channel gun positions came after earlier British raiders drew one of the heaviest Nazi antiaircraft barrages seen from the Folkestone area in weeks.

In an afternoon sweep over northern France the R. A. F. shot down seven German pursuit planes without a British loss, the Air Ministry said. One British craft on patrol was downed later.

Winging through soupy weather, British raiders last night attacked the occupied French ports of Brest, Cherbourg and Le Havre and targets in northwest Germany.

Tonight the R. A. F. confirmed reports that another raid on Naples, Italy, was carried out by heavy bombers Wednesday night and Thursday morning, with new fires set in the railway station area. Fires set the previous night were still burning, a communique said.

(The Italian high command announced the raid Friday but claimed damage was slight and there were only five wounded, in contrast with the admitted damage and deaths caused Tuesday night and last week.)

Berlin, Oct. 24 (AP).—Hamburg and Kiel were bombed during the night by British raiders, a German communique said today.

An announcement said some civilians were killed and wounded. Only slight damage to buildings was acknowledged.

One bomber was said to have been shot down.

German bombers on armed reconnaissance attacked the port of Dundee, Scotland, last night, causing several large fires, informed sources said.

Request for funds for the new tanks, he said, will go to Congress fairly soon. He added that he hoped a more rounded program, presumably including other ordnance, naval and aircraft items, would be completed this autumn or by the first of January.

Decision to expand tank production, he declared, was the result of certain factors on the fighting fronts, particularly North Africa, which pointed to the increased importance of the mobile fortresses. The original tank program, laid down a year ago last spring, is now in full swing and reaching toward its peak, he added.

He stressed the fact that the new program will turn out tanks primarily for American use, rather than for lend-lease purposes.

Although exact figures on tank production are not obtainable, it has been estimated that the output of medium tanks of 28 tons is at the rate of better than 200 a month. Light tanks of 14 tons, whose production represented comparatively minor difficulties, are being turned out in substantially larger quantities and are no longer considered a production problem.

Explaining his refusal to cite specific figures on the grounds that someone else would like to know them, he also declined to indicate whether the production plans for heavy bombers would also be doubled, as has been recently reported.

This is information that the Nazis would also like to have, he asserted, and added that in the future the OPM would discontinue its monthly announcement of plane production and would state only if there had been an increase or decrease and what relation the program bore to the schedule.

fense Council, last night urged all citizens to attend the special meetings in their respective communities.

"It is primarily the responsibility of the citizens themselves to effectively organize and carry out this air-raid protection program," said Col. Bolles. "We can explain what they should do—but it is up to them to follow through."

Physicians' Help Asked

Col. Bolles also revealed yesterday that Washington physicians had been asked to volunteer their services for physical examinations of auxiliary police and fire units.

The call from District defense chiefs was made in collaboration with the District Medical Society's committee on military affairs.

It was suggested that the physicians volunteer in teams of four, including one surgeon to each team. Col. Bolles estimated that volunteer police and fire units may eventually grow to five times the number of existing regular forces. Plans have yet to be completed for this phase of the defense program.

Speakers Scheduled

Although most of the citizen groups meeting tonight have scheduled no guest speakers, the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, meeting in the E. V. Brown School, Connecticut Avenue and McKinley Street, will hear Surgeon General Thomas Parran talk on "England's Health Preparations." Dr. Parran returned recently from a visit to London.

Members of the Lincoln Park area will meet in Eastern High School. Two guest speakers will be Representative John S. Gibson (Democrat), of Georgia, and William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds.

The Kalorama Citizens Association will meet at the John Quincy Adams School, Nineteenth and California Streets Northwest, with Renah F. Camalier, Senate District Committee counsel, as speaker.

The Arkansas Avenue Community Association will meet in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School. Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, and Representative John M. Robsion (Republican), of Kentucky, will speak.

The President's Day

By International News Service

FIRED BRIDGES: With the faint but unmistakable odor of burning bridges pervading his office, the President yesterday turned on the bells, whistles and trains; gave La Guardia a great, big unequivocal blessing in his re-election campaign. In high good humor and a story-telling streak, Mr. Roosevelt chatted glibly with the correspondents, illustrated points freely with anecdote and Rooseveltian jokes. While Lend-Lease Expeditor John Biggers waited, the President talked on, revealed an impending program to double defense production, among other things.

HOME BASE: After breakfast-conferencing with Harry Hopkins, Biggers sauntered over to the executive offices to report in to the big boss. From here on in, the President told him, Biggers will stay in Washington, act as an American agent for the British in lend-lease matters.

FARMS: Two husky gentlemen faced the President about noon with news from the farm front. Secretary Wickard and Edward O'Neal told a pleased Mr. Roosevelt that the farmers seemed pretty well satisfied with the farm parity as is . . .

SOLIDARITY: After a brief talk with Congressman Thad F. Wasielewski, who was scratched Thursday, the President got set for a bit of diplomacy. Accompanied by Brazilian Ambassador Felipe de Espile, Horacio Carvlaho, leading Brazilian publisher, came to tell Mr. Roosevelt a few stories from south of the border, present him with a letter signed by all of Brazil's newspaper publishers expressing their devotion to the cause of hemispheric solidarity and the Administration's foreign policy.

SHADOWS BEFORE: Sidney Hillman, who has been wading in a little hot water lately, and Mediator William H. Davis came in at the President's beckoning, left with stiff orders to clear up the captive mine and Air Associates strikes.

PSSST: Col. Wild Bill Donovan and a brace of his mystery men from the Information Coordination Office, slipped quietly into the Presidential office, slipped out even more quietly, silent as to their mission, past, present and future.

LUNCH FOR ONE: Grabbing at the day's only lull, the President worked steadily at the mountainous pile of data, letters, memos, etc., in his desk basket during lunch; was still at it when the Cabinet members began filing in for a 2 o'clock meet. For well over two hours, while crowds collected on the sidewalk outside of the gates, the Cabinet and the President discussed all those things Hitler would like to know, exited with long, serious faces and no revelations.

Little Change Seen as Gas Ban Is Lifted

Neither Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes' office nor a majority of District of Columbia gasoline filling stations expect to change operations materially because of the lifting of gasoline restrictions, it was indicated last night.

Most District gasoline stations hope that they will be able to retain the 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. curfew, leaving customers to buy their gas as they buy their groceries during daylight hours. For the present, a large majority apparently plan to remain closed, with future policy dependent in large measures "on what the other fellow does." The same decision has been made by filling station operators in other Atlantic Coast cities.

It is still patriotic to save gas. In removing restrictions, Ickes said, "It is my hope that our people will exercise good judgment in the use of gasoline and oil. We have made real gains since early summer, and with the exercise of common sense regarding the use of petroleum and its products, we ought to be able to maintain our gains and prevent any losses."

Labor Shortage

One factor which will prevent District filling station proprietors from opening nights in the near future is the current District labor shortage, according to Harry Wainwright, research director, District Gasoline Dealers' Association. Advertisements placed in all Washington newspapers last weekend for 25 filling station men netted only 20, he said.

"With the Army drafting our men, and private industry taking others, not many were laid off when sales were curtailed," he said.

Consumption will jump up to the prerestriction level as soon as sufficient gas is made available, Wainwright said. He expressed the opinion that the 600 stations in the District could handle additional sales without any congestion.

A majority of workers questioned declared that they never wanted to return to the all-night service. Some said they "had enjoyed sleeping at night" and otherwise leading "a normal existence." Some feared that competition would force them to return to night operation.

No Layoffs Predicted

At the Office of Petroleum Coordination for National Defense, no personnel layoffs are contemplated. An Interior Department spokesman said the office has enough other work to keep its 175 Washington employes and 5 field offices busy. This work was assigned to the office by President Roosevelt last May 28 when he gave Ickes the job of petroleum coordinator, but has been lost sight of during the furor which the gasoline curfew created.

Ickes turned yesterday to another gasoline supply problem and asked the oil industry to take immediate action to raise the output of 100-octane aviation gasoline. He made public the results of a survey of American refining capacity showing that only 43,278 barrels of high-test aviation gasoline are being produced each day, compared with a goal of 120,000 barrels a day for January 1, 1943.

"Only with extreme effort can the United States output of 100-octane gasoline be increased to 100,000 barrels daily by 1943," he said, pointing out that this would be 20,000 short of the goal.

Present Output

Present plans would produce only 57,829 barrels daily by 1943, unless every bit of potential additional capacity were used, he said. Government assistance in financing new refinery equipment was offered the industry.

Donald M. Nelson, director of priorities, formally ended ten weeks of gasoline rationing yesterday by removing restrictions on the sale to 100,000 filling stations on the Atlantic Coast, following a request from Ickes, as a result of Britain's return of 40 oil tankers to the American coastwise trade.

6 Army Planes Reported Missing

In addition, four planes, one known to be an Army bomber, were reported missing along the fog-bound North Pacific Coast.

Provincial police and the U. S. Coast Guard at Ketchikan, Alaska, were asked to search for the bomber, unreported since it left Yukatat, between Juneau and Sordoval at 10:30 a. m., Tuesday, for Edmonton, Alberta. A dispatch from Prince Rupert, British Columbia, said that two private planes and one of undetermined type also were being sought.

The five killed in the one known crash were Capt. Franklin S. Nelson, Salt Lake; Second Lieut. E. W. Sell, copilot, Lander, Wyo.; Technical Sergt. Andy Zeik, Salt Lake; Technical Sergt. Robert M. Kinney, Salt Lake, and Private (First Class) John W. Phillips, Salt Lake. All were attached to the Seventh bombardment group at Fort Douglas.

The bomber burned after the crash. The Associated Press said that if the ship had gone 100 yards to the left it would have missed the peak, enveloped in heavy fog.

The gasoline supply of the five pursuit planes, reported missing from Sacramento, was long exhausted. The fog scattered the P-40 machines over a wide area and one of them cracked up in landing at an emergency field at Smith, Nev. Another pilot was reported to have parachuted from his plane over the rugged Tehachapi Mountains. Only two of the 19 planes completed the trip to McClellan Field. Eight made emergency landings at Smith and four landed at Stockton, Calif. All were en route from Windsor Lock, Conn., to McChord Field, Wash.

A crew of nine was reported aboard the bomber from which three men parachuted near Wilmington, N. C., when a flare ignited. The pilot, Lieut. J. S. Porter, of McDill Field, Fla., took the plane safetly to McDill.

A Col. Gill was reported to be in charge of the bomber missing in Alaska.

Others sought along the North Pacific Coast were:

A monoplane of the Yukon Mining Corporation, of San Francisco, missing on a flight from Hyder, Alaska, to Seattle. Aboard were Livingston Ernecke, Berkeley, Calif., president of the Treadwell Yukon Mining Corporation, and Pilot Charles Gropstis, of San Francisco. They left Hyder Wednesday and were last reported over Cape Mudge in Georgia Strait.

A private plane which refueled at Alberta, B. C., and later was seen flying over Butedale, B. C., 200 miles north, Thursday noon. The plane had not been seen since.

A plane, of undetermined type, en route from Alert Bay to Ketchikan, reported overdue there. No details on this ship were immediately available.

Hungry Wild Dog Devours Kingman Lake Isle Squatter

A few gnawed bones and a wild dog were found on an island in the middle of Kingmans Lake yesterday, grim evidence that a Negro squatter had been devoured by the starving animal.

Walter Wright, Negro, of 2800 Benning Road Northeast, made the discovery shortly after 9 a. m., when he rowed to the island to visit the recluse. Last night the remains were identified as those of Omara Wilson, 50.

Wright identified clothing scattered on the ground outside of a board shack as those belonging to Wilson. The man had not been seen "for two or three weeks," Wright told detectives.

Policemen guarded both sides of the Anacostia River last night to prevent anyone from going to the island, where the vicious mongrel still ran at large. Dense underbrush prevented capture of the animal yesterday and police intend to send a squad to the island this morning.

The island is located between East Capitol Street and Gallinger Hospital at a point about opposite the new National Guard Armory. About 400 yards long and 100 yards wide, the island is located about the middle of the lake, 150 yards from shore.

Detective Sergts. Dempsey Perry and E. E. Scott, who went to the island, said all they could find of the man were his bones scattered over a 50-foot radius, it was said.

The two investigators said they did not see the dog, though his snarling and barking was heard from the underbrush.

Wright told police Wilson kept himself alive by collecting trash. There was no food or money found in the shack and it was speculated that Wilson may have died of malnutrition and that the hungry dog ate his remains.

Germans Plot France's Death, Edge Declares

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 24.—Walter E. Edge, former United States Ambassador to France, charged in a statement broadcast to Europe by short wave today that Germany was holding vast hordes of young Frenchmen as hostages "so that the French race will wither and die."

Edge said Hitler made elaborate promises that nearly two million French soldiers would be allowed to return to their homes when the German-French truce was reached, but that "according to my information fewer than 100,000 have come back to France, and of these the great majority are the terribly wounded, and the men past middle age."

The former Ambassador, who served from 1929 to 1933, personally handed his statement to newspapermen. He did not broadcast himself, however.

Broadcast Is Official

The statement was translated into European languages for broadcast by speakers under supervision of Col. William J. Donovan, United States coordinator of information.

With the assertion the Nazis were enslaving French prisoners in German factories and fields, Edge said, "By holding these men, Hitler is dealing a damaging blow to the French race. They are held so they cannot come home, and marry and have children."

He continued:

"As one of the living former American Ambassadors to France, I feel it my duty to tell the French people that so long as there is an America, Hitler cannot win."

"In all history, there is nothing so brutal, so unfair, so inhumane and so bestial as the action of the Nazi military in the past week. To snatch innocent men off the street and remove them from life for a deed of which they know nothing should cut off the Nazi butchers from the brotherhood of man.

"These things America will not forget. We are forging the mightiest weapons of war the world has ever known, in the greatest numbers. I feel that I can truthfully tell the French people that when we finally put aside these weapons, France will again be free."

Hatch Group Maps Langer Hearing Plans

By the Associated Press

The Senate Elections Committee completed yesterday preliminary plans for a public hearing November 3 on the fitness of Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, to hold the office he won in 1940.

The committee adopted a suggestion of Chairman Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, to depart from custom and conduct the hearing as nearly as possible like a court of law, with direct and cross-examination of witnesses by attorneys for contending parties.

Ordinarily only Senators question the witnesses, but Hatch suggested that more orderly procedure could be accomplished in this case by permitting attorneys to question their witnesses, allowing opposing attorneys to cross-examine and then having Senators clear up any points they desired.

Mulloy May Be Heard First

As the committee prepared to hear the testimony of principal witnesses—leaving the door open to send a subcommittee to North Dakota for hearing of minor witnesses later if necessary—it appeared that James Mulloy, of Bismarck, N. Dak., a former Langer associate, would be an important and possibly the first witness heard.

Former Senator E. R. Burke, of Nebraska, is attorney for the North Dakota committee of petitioners, which protested against Langer being seated last January, mentioned that he might be the first witness to take the stand.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, emphasized his interest in the appearance of Mulloy, whose testimony was taken by committee investigators. Testimony obtained by them dealt with a series of trials in Federal District Court where Langer ultimately was acquitted on charges of conspiracy to obstruct the orderly operation of an act of Congress.

The petitioners charged that in connection with the Federal court trials in Bismarck in 1934-35 that efforts were made to reach and improperly influence jurors and prospective jurors, and the presiding judge.

Also mentioned as a witness was Gregory Brunk, of Des Moines, Iowa, who purchased lands from Langer. The petitioners claimed it was a "fictitious sale" to "conceal part of the profits" to Langer from some bond transactions.

Langer Ready to Testify

Langer said he was ready to take the stand Monday or immediately, but the committee decided that this would not give enough time for witnesses to reach Washington.

The hearing opened quietly after Hatch, conferring with attorneys before the meeting, declared he was "sorry" he had lost his "temper" Thursday.

He said his suggestion for shortening the list of witnesses to be heard in Washington was made with the intention of accomodating Langer, and that he lost his temper when the North Dakotan objected.

Jury Condemns Catoe to Death

ramowitz walked over to Catoe's attorneys, conversed for a moment, and shook their hands. He expressed his gratitude to each of the jurors before leaving the courtroom.

Following the verdict, Catoe was taken to the District Jail, joining six other men sentenced to die in the electric chair. They are Guy Oden, whose motion for a new trial is now under consideration; John E. Eklund, sniper killer; and James R. McKenzie, Roland J. Lindsey, Vernon Williams and William I. Robinson, convicted of rape.

Trial Lasted Nine Days

Catoe's conviction yesterday concluded a nine-day trial, the first one on ten indictments of murder and rape against the defendant.

Since October 15, when the trial opened, the jury, and a thirteenth alternate juror, have been sequestered. They have been living at the Hotel Continental, guarded by three United States marshals, and have not been permitted to read any newspapers or magazines, or to communicate with their families or friends.

After their dismissal by Justice Morris yesterday, the jurors held a crowded reunion with their families in the courtroom.

In closing arguments Attorneys Curran and Fihelly, representing the Government, both addressed the jury.

Pointing at Catoe, Attorney Curran asserted that "this courtroom has been besmirched and bedraggled by the most amazing carnival of untruths ever foisted on an American jury. Would you put your credence into the testimony of one of the worst killers ever to grace the annals of this community?"

To the jurors, he shouted, "I represent you, and you, and you. As your district attorney, I ask you to find a verdict of murder in the first degree with the death penalty."

Attorney Fihelly told the jurors: "Society looks to you for our protection. Let it be known far and wide," he begged, "that rape and murder will not be tolerated. In the name of justice, in the name of Rose Abramowitz, and the women of this community. I ask you to give this killer what he deserves, the death penalty."

Defense Counsel Walter M. Shea, again charging that Catoe confessed only after being "tortured" by police, asked: "Why did they take him to a doctor a few days after he was arrested? Was it because he was so well and felt so good?

"No, policemen don't hit prisoners," Shea continued. "They don't threaten them, either. They just carry blackjacks for the sake of carrying them.

"There is no doubt," said Shea, "that this is a terrible crime with which the defendant is charged. It is a crime which every intelligent citizen regrets. But this defendant is not guilty."

OFF TO COURTHOUSE—Delivered to the special grand jury on German agents yesterday were two cans full of burned Congressional franked mail recovered Thursday night from the rear of the America First Committee, which has its Washington headquarters at 1712 Connecticut Avenue propaganda under Congressional frank.

Viereck's lawyers yesterday filed a demurrer, a technical attack on the indictment, which will be argued on November 4.

Summoned by the grand jurors on the night of September 18 was Prescott Dennett, secretary-treasurer of these committees. Early the next morning, Hill ordered a House truck to make a hurried trip to Dennett's headquarters at 1430 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

The truck picked up 20 mailbags, containing about a ton of unaddressed franked envelopes, took 12 of them to the America First Committee and returned to the House with the other eight. Hill twice ordered these placed in a storage room, on the sixth floor of the New House Office Building, which contains a bin used by Fish.

When served with a subpena, the America First Committee later gave up ten bags to the grand jury. Miss Isabel French, office manager, claimed that these were all the committee received. However, a quantity of franked material was burned by the committee day before yesterday.

What the Jury Asked

The grand jurors said in the indictment returned yesterday that in the course of their investigation of the German propaganda machine it became important that they should know:

(a) Whether Viereck, who registered as a German agent, admitting that he has $10,000 to spend to push the sale of one anti-British book, had nevertheless violated the Registration Act.

(b) Whether Viereck set up the anti-interventionist Dennett committees and whether they sent out propaganda under Congressional frank.

(c) How Dennett, Hill, the committees and others got hold of large quantities of postage-free reprints from the Congressional Record.

(d) Whether Hill, Viereck, Dennett and others wrote speeches and got them printed in the Record.

(e) Whether Viereck, the German agent, paid Hill money for Record reprints of such material.

(f) "Whether 20 mail sacks filled with reprints of excerpts from the Record enclosed in franked envelopes" was taken from Dennett's place after he was called by the grand jury and whether any mailbags were placed in the storeroom used by Mr. Fish, and if so, by whose order.

Testimony Is Revealed

The grand jurors said in the indictment that when Hill testified under oath he told this story:

"I do not know the whereabout of the eight sacks. . . . I did not give any instructions as to where they should be taken. . . . I did not tell the messenger to take them up to Congressman Fish's storeroom (where they were found, sampled and photographed by The Post). . . . I don't know where to look for the eight sacks. . . . Those sacks were never stored anywhere under my direction . . ."

However, when Hill was given the choice of being held in contempt of court or producing the sacks, he got them to the grand jury several hours before the time allowed him expired.

The story told to the grand jury by Hill exactly paralleled the story told to the House by Representative Fish, when he took the floor upon a point of personal privilege on the Monday after The Post exposed the part his office played in getting getting the mail bags away from Dennett's headquarters.

Called Charges a "Smear"

Fish told the House he wanted to answer "these contemptible, dastardly and lying charges that have been made against me by The Washington Post. These smear charges from beginning to end are based on a series of tissue of lies."

Fish then told the House that Dennett called up his office and reported that he had 500 copies of a Fish speech. Fish said he had no idea how Dennett got these copies. Hill, Fish went on, wanted these copies and sent a truck for them, but for nothing else.

Representative John M. Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, broke in to refer to the occasion when The Post accepted an invitation extended by Walter Reynolds, another of Fish's secretariat, to examine the mailbags stored in front of Fish's storage bin. Fish denied there was such an invitation. "Here is a statement in The Washington Post admitting burglary on the part of one of their own men," commented Coffee.

"Lie Repeated," Fish Says

"That is absolutely right," Fish chimed in. "The gentleman has the facts."

A few days later, Fish returned to the floor to say, "Now this Post editorial repeats that lie that Dillard Stokes carried in his article to the effect that when the 20 mailbags from Dennett's office were disposed of, 'eight of them were stored at the request of his secretary—that is, my secretary (that is, Hill)—in the House Office Building storeroom.'

"In all fairness to my secretary," Fish continued, "I want to repeat that is a lie. He (meaning Hill) did not instruct, order or advise the truckman to take any of these bags to my storeroom."

On that occasion, Fish charged that The Post's investigation was carried on by committing "violation of the law, a double offense," of contempt of the House and contempt of court.

Jury Thinks Otherwise

The indictment has this to say of the story told by Hill, which was the same at that told the House by Fish:

"And the grand jurors upon their oaths assert the fact to be that he, the said George Hill, when so testifying as aforesaid, well knew that he, the said George Hill, on September 19, 1941, gave instructions to an employe of the House of Representatives, namely Frank R. Monroe, to take the said mail sacks from the said residence of the said Prescott Dennett, and further did give instructions on September 19 to employes of the House, namely, Charles Wilson and Michael O'Gorman, to place the said mailbags in storage space 30 upon the sixth floor of the new House Office Building, and that the said mail sacks were in fact on September 19, pursuant to the instructions of the said defendant, George Hill, taken from the said residence of the said Dennett and placed in storage space 30."

And by telling the story that he did, the indictment continued, Hill "did unlawfully, feloniously, willfully and contrary to his oath, testify, declare, depose, certify and state a material matter which he did not believe to be true, and which was in fact false . . . and so was then and there guilty of corrupt perjury."

Denied Knowing Viereck

The indictment, in the second count, recited this testimony of Hill's:

"On my oath I never talked to George Sylvester Viereck. I don't know him. I have never met Mr. Viereck anywhere, at any time. I have never at any time called or talked with Mr. Viereck either in person or by telephone. I am positive of it. I have never received any money from Mr. Viereck, directly or indirectly."

This tale, too, said the grand jurors, was "corrupt perjury" because the fact was that Hill knew that he was acquainted with Hitler's chief propagandist in America and had had numerous conversations with him.

Besides Maloney and Hickey, special prosecutors of the Department of Justice propaganda squad, the indictment was signed by Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, District Attorney Edward M. Curran and George A. McNulty, chief of the trial section.

Spars With Court

Associated with former Representative O'Connor as Hill's counsel is Attorney William F. Cusick. Attorney Richard A. Harman, Washington, who accompanied Hill to the grand jury room Thursday, announced last night that he would not take any part in the case.

O'Connor sparred with the court at the arraignment, suggesting that the indictment was void because it was not dated and hinting that he might claim it was prematurely made public. When the question of bail was raised, O'Connor said:

"This defendant is secretary to Congressman Fish. He is an unimportant person in the picture. This is aiming at the lion and shooting the rabbit, and if I may say, I am here to plead Congressman Fish 'not guilty.'"

O'Connor asked for a $2000 bail and the prosecutor asked for $10,000.

"Protesteth Too Much"

"Mr. O'Connor is the one who brought Congressman Fish's name into this proceedings," Maloney pointed out. I am not aware that Congressmen Fish has been indicted. . . . And Mr. O'Connor's protestations remind me of Shakespeare, in that he 'protesteth too much,' but may it please the Court, in this case, Mr. Hill, by his own admission has received at least $12,000 in cash within the past five months from sources that he will not disclose, and he will not say what use has been made of it. . . . Every indication here and every bit of evidence points to the absolute fact that he is the key man here in Washington in this distribution of propagandistic literature through the mails and under Congressional frank, all of which, as the Government says, we will show, was master-minded by foreign German agents."

O'Connor protested the revelation of Hill's admission about the $12,000.

"Where did you say it came from?" Mr. O'Conner," asked Justice Goldsborough.

May Be 'Misfortune'

O'Connor said he didn't know, but that Hill told him it never came from any German government. "That is th whole picture behind this," he added, "and again I say that the aim is at Congressman Fish."

"Of course," retorted Maloney, "this is something that has been carried on in Congressman's Fish's office and naturally the whole investigation into it centers upon the activities of one man, the key man, who is now employed by Hamilton Fish. That is not our fault; perhaps it is Mr. Fish's misfortune."

Grand Jury Given Franked Card's Ashes

The ashes of about 2000 pieces of franked mail were placed yesterday before the special grand jury on German agents, which has charged that the Hitler propaganda machine uses Congressional privileges to distribute its material in America.

The franked material—envelopes and postcards—was burned piece by piece for several hours in an alley behind the America First headquarters at 1712 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. Recovered late that night, the documents were still smoking and were badly crushed, but many of the items could be read.

Early yesterday Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, of the District Court, issued a summons which commanded Dillard Stokes, a Post reporter, to appear before the grand jury and bring with him:

"Any reprints or pieces or fragments of reprints from the Congressional Record and envelopes or other material under Congressional frank found in metal containers, or otherwise, now in your possession."

Reporter Questioned

Shortly after the order was served, a van of the United States marshal was sent to receive the two cans full of ashes. Later, Stokes was called into the grand jury room and remained half an hour.

Questioned when he came out, Stokes replied in the same words he has heard from hundreds of grand jury witnesses he has interviewed, "No comment."

Mrs. Bennett Clark, the American First local chairman, said Thursday night, when told of the cards being burned: "I can't imagine them burning anything like that . . . You can't pin anything like that, any connection with those mail bags, on the America First Committee."

Yesterday Mrs. Clark said she made this comment without having any definite information and that as a matter of fact the organization has been burning "trash' 'almost daily since it moved into the Connecticut Avenue headquarters on October 11.

"There was nothing to it," Mrs. Clark declared, "we simply considered the old envelopes and cards as trash and burned them along with the rest of the stuff. If the Department of Justice wants any more information I'll be glad to give it to them."

Miss Isabel French, office manager, and Hugh Fisher, a volunteer worker, called at the Department of Justice yesterday to explain the matter to Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, of the propaganda squad, who have been investigating German agents before the grand jury.

When the grand jury ordered the America First Committee to surrender 12 mailbags removed from the headquarters of Prescott Dennett, alleged tool of the German propaganda machine, the committee gave up 10 bags and Miss French said that these were all that were received from Dennett. She added that these were at the time believed to have come from Representative Hamilton Fish, whose secretary, George Hill, was indicted on a perjury charge in connection with the mailbags yesterday.

Spy Suspect's 'Love Interest' Wilts on Stand

By Pat McGrady
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 24.—A pretty brunette, her jaunty flower-bedecked shovel hat cocked defiantly, took the stand today in Brooklyn Federal Court, where 15 men are on trial charged with espionage conspiracy.

Without looking at the packed benches or heeding the hush that marked her entrance, she strode across the floor with a carriage that a mannequin well might admire.

Then, when the attendant administered the oath, she glanced toward the defendants. Her shoulders suddenly slumped and she stumbled uncertainly toward the witness stand.

She was Evelyn Clayton Lewis, 38, Fayetteville (Ark.) artist and sculptress, whom Frederick J. Duquesne had summoned from her cell in the Women's House of Detention to testify in his behalf. She had pleaded guilty to the first count of the indictment which charged failure to register as a German agent. Disposition of the second count, alleging the giving of vital defense secrets to Germany, is still pending.

Answer Inaudible

"Miss Lewis, do you know Frederick Duquesne?" asked Defense Counsel Frank J. Walsh.

She nodded, but her oral answer was inaudible even to the nearby court stenographer. Then, suddenly tired and exhausted, she leaned across the bench and whispered hoarsely to Judge Mortimer W. Byers something about "nature of the case . . . feel my emotions are so deeply concerned."

Court, counsel, Government attorneys and Duquesne agreed that she be withdrawn.

The defendant Duquesne had identified her as the woman with whom he had lived for eight months prior to his arrest last June. He said she was compelled to disrobe and change to street clothes in their one-room apartment, shielded from G-men's gaze only by a door, which once was flung back to reveal her nude. He contended this was one of several outrages by agents.

The Government contends Duquesne used her as a catspaw to write things that he himself dared not write, to conduct correspondence that might be used against him.

"Sorry for Her"

"I feel sorry for her," said a Government attorney after she had left. "She was a swell girl and a lot of help to the Government. Funny what love does to some people."

She was another page in the life of Duquesne, whom the Government has called "a spy for the last 40 years" and who had shouted frequently from the stand during his four-day examination that he was an "anti-British revolutionary."

In the story of his life, Duquesne told of his association with great men of many lands, including Belgium's King Leopold and President Theodore Roosevelt.

The Government produced in court an aging Negro, James Amos, and asked Duquesne whether he recognized him as Roosevelt's personal valet. Duquesne said he did not. Amos said the lack of recognition was mutual.

George W. Herz, counsel for Hermann Lang, who is charged with having given particulars of the Norden bombsight to Germany, said he would seek a deposition from Secretary of War Stimson, who told a press conference yesterday that he had no information that Germany had the device.

Tells Court She Was 'Foolish Youngster'

LOIS LOCKNER, 22, night club singer convicted of falsely representing herself as a Federal employe with intent to defraud, told a New York court that she had been "just a foolish youngster" in telling FBI acquaintances that she, too, was an agent. "It was unintentional and done without malice," she said. "I want to get somewhere and have high ambitions. By finding me guilty, the court has wiped out that chance," she pleaded

U. S. Moves To Recover Stitely Money

The Federal Government yesterday moved to recover $29,300 from the Washington Loan and Trust Co., charging that the company had illegally obtained the money from the Treasury Department in reimbursement for forged checks presented to the bank by Reno E. Stitely, former National Park Service voucher clerk now in the Lorton, Va., Reformatory.

The charge was made in a motion filed before District Court by Assistant United States Attorney Bernard J. Long, asking for a summary judgment to terminate present litigation, which involves three suits against local banks, totaling about $80,000, rising out of the Stitely embezzlement.

The other actions pending are a $48,600 suit against the Columbia National Bank and a $3000 suit against the Riggs National Bank. All three suits were filed originally in January, 1939.

Yesterday's motion, which alleges that the Washington Loan & Trust Co. acted in bad faith in recovering the money, will not immediately affect the other two suits.

Source of the litigation was the conviction of Stitely in 1938 on charges of having misapplied Interior Department pay-roll funds to his own use. He was found guilty of having kept records of a fake CCC camp, forging pay-roll checks to fictitious enrollees, and then cashing the checks, through forged indorsements. He is now serving a sentence of 6 to 12 years.

Manville Wars On Blondes

By Inez Robb
By International News Service

New York, Oct. 24.—Ladies, please copy. Or paste in the bonnet for ready reference.

Tommy Manville, the all-time, all-out sugar daddy, served notice today that in the future he is a sucker for no one but Uncle Sam.

Taxation is forcing him to start a blitz on blondes.

"With taxes what they are, the only person I can afford to assist in the future is Uncle Sam, who is my favorite relative anyway," Manville declared.

"Zounds, sir!" cried your correspondent, "do you realize that over on Broadway this announcement will have the same effect as a Morgenthau manifesto further devaluing the dollar would have in Wall Street?"

"Good bye, girls, I'm through!", whistled slightly off-key, was the only answer of the man who is sometimes known as "Ladies' day at the Comstock Lode."

Data on Milk Is Encouraging

Data so far collected in efforts to establish eligibility of several schools in low income areas for penny half-pints of milk is definitely encouraging, Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday.

Chairman of a special city-wide committee named last month by the Board of Education to prepare a penny milk program for approval of the Department of Agriculture, Haycock said he will ask for a conference with Agriculture officials in a few days for the purpose of determining whether all necessary facts are in hand.

Under regulations by which the department sponsors low cost milk projects throughout the country, the applying community must demonstrate economic necessity and guarantee that penny half-pints would appreciably increase consumption.

After conferring with Agriculture officials, Haycock said he will call a meeting of the special committee.

Movie Union Won Increases, Witness Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—A defense witness today said members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (A. F. of L.) were granted $3,000,000 in wage increases under the administration of George E. Browne, union president on trial with William Bioff, his personal representative, on extortion charges.

The witness, Patrick J. Casey, chairman of the Motion Picture Producers' committee on the studios' basic labor agreement, testified general wage increases of 10 per cent were given under the pact in 1936 and 1937.

Casey asserted that throughout Browne's presidency he had observed no change in the I. A. T. S. E.'s demands for higher wages or better working conditions.

Met Movie Chiefs

Browne and Bioff are charged with violation of the Federal Anti-racketeering Act in the alleged extortion of $550,000 from four major motion picture companies, and have been accused by witnesses of using strike threats to obtain payments from producers.

Michael Leddy, defense counsel, asked Casey whether he knew Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's Inc.; the Warner Brothers' Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Films, and other producers whose testimony was that they paid Bioff money. Casey replied that he knew them all, and that he met them on an average of 5 to 20 times a year.

"Did any of these gentlemen ever tell you that Browne or Bioff had been paid any money by them?" Leddy asked.

Question Is Permitted

Federal Judge John C. Knox permitted the witness to answer, over the objections of United States Attorney Mathias Correa.

"No, sir," Casey said.

"If we are to ask the people in the movie industry who were not told of this, we could stay here until Christmas," Correa remarked.

"Did any of these gentlemen ever tell you that Bioff or Browne demanded money?" Leddy continued.

"No, sir."

"Did any of these gentlemen ever tell you that Bioff or Browne would declare a strike if money wasn't paid to them?" Leddy inquired.

Casey again replied in the negative.

President Appeals To Lewis on Strike

Earlier in the day, Gov. Charles Edison of New Jersey had asked company President F. LeRoy Hill to step out of the picture at the picketed plant because "the trouble with Air Associates seems to be you."

"You are angry and tired," the Governor telegraphed Hill. "These are not the elements out of which grow industrial peace."

Hill had previously walked out of Mediation Board proceedings on the case and both he and the directing board had refused to accept board proposals to settle the dispute, which centered on union security and contract demands of the C. I. O. auto workers.

The dispute was referred to the OPM and thence to the War Department for action.

Operations at the plant, struck for several weeks, were stopped completely two days ago by massed picket lines. It had been predicted here that unless the company accepted Mediation Board recommendations Army occupation of the plant is probable.

In Bendix, meanwhile, Hill released a statement in which he charged that the strike was "Communist inspired."

One Mine Dispute Ends

A few minutes before President Roosevelt directed his appeal to Lewis, word was received that another coal mine dispute, involving 15,000 Alabama workers, had been settled on acceptance by the union and operators of board proposals issued earlier this week for a compromise wage increase.

The proposed joint coal negotiating board was part of one of the alternate formulas recommended by William H. Davis, chairman of the Mediation Board. Both formulas provided, in effect, for arbitration, calling on owners and union alike to continue production during the proceedings and to accept the ultimate arbitration decision.

Under the first formula, the full, 11-man Mediation Board would act as arbitrators. Under the second, the joint board, comprised of equal number of representatives of operators and miners, would seek to reach an agreement. Failing this, they would jointly select an arbitrator with power to issue a final binding decision.

Chance to Avert Strike

Hope that the proposals would be accepted by both parties and thus avert a strike which threatens to halt production of about one-tenth the Nation's total coal supply and thus paralyze the vital defense steel industry was seen in the power of the President's appeal, and in the fact that earlier the local representative of Lewis had accepted the recommendations in the Alabama coal mine wage dispute.

Pay Raised 25 Cents a Day

The Alabama settlement involved the acceptance of a 25 cent per day wage increase, 15 cents less than that won by the remainder of the coal miners in the Appalachian area following their 30-day strike last April.

Yesterday's proposal by the board was accompanied by a frank admission that it was unwilling to make recommendations on the closed shop issue, presumably "because of the possible repercussions of any agreement here made on the steel and shipbuilding industries, in one or both of which most of the interests involved in this dispute are engaged."

Looked for Guidance

The board decision was not unanimous. Concurring with Davis he achieved in board negotiations because the union insisted on its right not to work with nonunion men, and the operators insisted on the right of each worker to make a free choice on union membership, and that "his employment should not be made to depend upon union membership."

Strike Seen If Currier Gets Contract

By Louis Stark

Copyright by New York Times

Richard J. Gray, president of the building construction department of the American Federation of Labor, declared yesterday before the Senate committee investigating defense contracts, that A. F. of L. members in Detroit would revolt against their leader if the P. J. Currier Co. received the award of a Government contract for 300 defense houses in Michigan.

Describing the rivalry between A. F. of L. and Congress of Industrial Organizations members, Gray asserted that the five-year, no-strike and check-off agreement made by P. J. Currier and the C. I. O.'s United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee was the result of advice by the employer to his men to join the C. I. O.

He showed the committee a communication of Currier to prove that a few days before he signed with the C. I. O. he had written that "our plant is operating an open shop."

While the stabilization agreement between the Government defense agencies and the A. F. of L. building unions called for no strikes, Gray pointed out that this arrangement did not cover unions like teamsters which are not in the building trades organizations. These unions, he said, might well refuse to haul sand, gravel and other materials to the Currier yards and the housing contracts would probably not be completed.

Gray laid the entire blame for the present disturbed situation in Detroit and other construction centers to the formation by the C. I. O. of a construction union as a rival to the A. F. L.; to the latter's "raids," notably the taking over of a union of A. F. L. teamsters in Minneapolis, and to what he said was a long history of bitter labor union opposition by Currier.

Asserting that the A. F. of L. shrdlu cmfwy m m m mmmmmmm to working on prefabricated building materials, Gray, an officer of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union, replied seriatim to the charges made yesterday before the committee by A. D. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O.'s construction union.

Replying to Lewis' charge that the labor division of the Office of Production Management under Sidney Hillman had served, in effect, as a recruiting agency for the A. F. of L. on defense projects, Gray said that he had definite knowledge that Hillman had repeatedly told A. F. of L. building union leaders that "the Government will not permit itself to be the organizing agent for any union."

Gray denied that the stabilization agreement gave the A. F. L. a monopoly on defense construction and said that a reference to a "virtual monopoly" in the A. F. L. weekly news service was not a responsibility of the building trade unions.

Scottish Rite Heads Indorse Foreign Policy

The Supreme Council of the Southern Jurisdiction of Scottish Rite Masons ended its bi-annual meeting here last night by pledging its support of the Administration's foreign policy. The council, representing approximately two million Masons throughout the Nation, went on record as striving "to transform our own land and the Western Hemisphere into an inexhaustible arsenal of democracy and an unconquerable fortress of freedom."

Earlier, the council authorized an aporopriation of one million dollars for the aid of Masons, their families and friends persecuted abroad by dictators or autocratic rulers.

"Ruthlessly Crushed"

The council declared: "In all those countries which cruel monsters in recent months have overrun with their conquering armies, the institution of freemasonry has been ruthlessly crushed, its properties seized and confiscated, its members cruelly persecuted and in thousands of instances maliciously murdered or thrown into prison or concentration camps, and our fraternity held up as an object of derision and vile contempt."

The Masonic body, "mother council" of world Scottish Rite Masonry, met at its headquarters, 1733 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Final act of the session was the conferring of the Thirty-third degree upon 224 persons. Ninety-five of them received the degree in person. The remainder will be awarded the degree at later meetings in their home States.

Connolly Gets Degree

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, was one of those awarded the degree.

Gen. John J. Pershing, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, and Bishop James E. Freeman, recipients of the degree in previous years, attended last night's session.

The council will hold its next meeting here in two years.

Mrs. Amos A. Fries Hostess to the Wives

More than 60 wives of visiting members of the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite Southern Jurisdiction attended a dinner in their honor at Hotel Roosevelt last night.

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, of 3305 Woodley Road Northwest, was the hostess.

A program of musical selections and readings followed the dinner. Mrs. Sanford Donaldson, of Yankton, S. D., played three piano selections. Mrs. Elizabeth Henney performed three dances illustrating the history of the Hawaiian hula. Miss Ella F. Harllee gave the readings. Sophocles Papas and members of the Columbia School of Music provided Hawaiian music.

Roosevelt Indorses LaGuardia in N. Y. Race

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—President Roosevelt crossed party lines today, ignoring William O'Dwyer, Democratic mayoralty candidate, and indorsing his long-time friend, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, for a third term in City Hall.

At his press conference in Washington, Mr. Roosevelt read a prepared statement in which he said, "I do not hesitate to express the opinion that Mayor LaGuardia and his administration has given the city the most honest and, I believe, the most efficient municipal government of any within my recollection."

Commented LaGuardia: "The President knows his New York City. It was indeed nice and generous of him to give me that strong indorsement."

The President's statement came at a time when the mayor was preparing to investigate his own campaign fund after O'Dwyer charged LaGuardia was spending one million dollars to gain reelaction.

Frederick E. Crane, former chief judge of the New York State Court of Appeals, and James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany and honorary chairman of the Democratic Finance Committee, were asked by LaGuardia to make the inquiry, and will start tomorrow.

The mayor has made O'Dwyer's charge a prime issue, saying: "I don't want to be mayor of New York if it takes a million dollars to elect me. If we have a million dollar campaign fund I will openly and publicly say I don't want anyone to vote for me."

In indorsing LaGuardia over O'Dwyer, who is Brooklyn District Attorney, Mr. Roosevelt aligned himself against National and state Democratic leaders, including National Chairman Edward J. Flynn, Bronx leader.

The President deprecated reports that Flynn would resign if LaGuardia received White House support. Flynn, in answer to a question, said he had no intention of resigning.

Flynn said in a statement that he did not believe President Roosevelt's indorsement of LaGuardia could defeat O'Dwyer and charged the mayor with a "cheap effort to ride into city hall on the President's national policies, which Judge O'Dwyer and all patriotic citizens support."

Tammany Silent

"Free speech is a cardinal philosophy of American democracy," said Flynn. "The President has seen fit to exercise this privilege, and I shall do likewise. I regret, however, that he has expressed his opinion with respect to the municipal election in New York City, where he does not reside or vote."

The President's statement was met with silence at Tammany Hall, where Secretary Bert Stand said Christopher Sullivan, Tammany leader, had authorized a "no comment."

Other backers of O'Dwyer, include State Chairman James A. Farley, who as national chairman handled two of Mr. Roosevelt's Presidential campaigns and also sat in his Cabinet; Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, whose support of the President has aided him in carrying this State, and Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti.

President Roosevelt, oddly enough, finds himself alongside his opponent in the last election, Wendell L. Willkie, who will speak for LaGuardia, and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, who called him "a great mayor."

Dr. Roth to Be Guest Preacher At Luther Place Mission

With Dr. Paul H. Roth, president of Northwestern Seminary of Minneapolis, Minn., as guest preacher, Luther Place Memorial Church at Thomas Circle will sponsor a preaching mission beginning tomorrow.

Dr. Roth will speak at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. tomorrow and at 8 p. m. daily, Monday through Friday.

Dr. Roth was graduated from Thiel College, Greeneville, Pa., and Chicago Lutheran Seminary, and after serving pastorates in Beloit, Wis., and Maywood, Ill., he returned to Chicago Seminary as professor of church history from 1915 to 1917. In 1917 he accepted a call in the same capacity at Northwestern Seminary, and in 1935 was elected its president.

Native of New York State, Dr. Roth is the son of a former president of Thiel College. The first Roth is said to have come to America in 1756 to become a missionary to the Delaware Indians. Dr. Roth will conduct a Bible study class daily at 6:30 p. m. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch is host pastor.

Tomorrow Is Masonic Club Sunday

Masonic Club Sunday will be observed tomorrow at 8 p. m. by the 18 clubs in Washington affiliated with the National League of Masonic Clubs. They will attend in a body the evening worship service at the New York Avenue Church, where Dr. Peter Marshall will deliver a sermon on "The Joy of Being Eccentric."

The gathering is held each year in commemoration of the Masonic Birthday of George Washington. Among those who will attend this service are the national president, Charles H. Taylor, assistant director of Civilian Conservation Corps; State President William A. Shytle, and President Oliver C. Short, of the advisory board of Masonic clubs, accompanied by their respective staffs. The church choir will sing "O How Amiable Are Thy Dwellings," by Barnby. The members of the Masonic clubs of the city and their families are particularly invited.

Current Problems Class To Hear Steinmeyer

Dr. Reuben D. Steinmeyer of the University of Maryland will address the Current Problems Class at All Souls' Unitarian Church tomorrow at 10 o'clock on "Post-War International Relations." At the same hour, Dr. Charles B. Hale, also of the University of Maryland, will continue his course before the Comparative Religion Class on the Hexateuch, speaking on "Exodus." The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D.D., will conduct a special service for the church school at 8:45 o'clock and at the 11 o'clock service will preach on "The Needed Ingredient."

Dr. Robert T. Craig Will Preach Here

Dr. Robert T. Craig, former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Des Moines, Iowa, and later pastor of the Summit Avenue Baptist Church, Jersey City, N. J., will be the guest speaker tomorrow morning and evening at Temple Baptist Church.

The Rev. Randolph L. Gregory, the pastor of Temple Baptist Church, has been granted a year's leave of absence by reason of his appointment as chaplain in the Army.

This Program Will Be Broadcast Over Station WOL from 8:30 to 9:30

Rites to Mark Mission Day Tomororw

Central Union Mission Sunday will be observed with special services in six local churches tomorrow, the cooperative program ending with a large mass meeting at 2:30 p. m. in Calvary Baptist Church.

Bishop Moore

Principal speaker at the mass meeting will be Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of Atlanta, Ga., prominent Methodist missionary whose work has taken him to China, Japan, Czecho-Slovakia and the Belgian Congo. He will also speak at the mission service arranged by Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church at 11 a. m.

The fifty-seventh annual banquet meeting of the Central Union Mission, at which more than 300 of its workers will hear reports of progress, will be held tonight at 6:30 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel. Bishop Moore and 10 officers and executive committeemen of the International Union of Gospel Missions will attend the dinner and take part in the Sunday programs. Mrs. John S. Bennett, superintendent of the mission, will make her report at the dinner.

Homer Rodeheaver, noted evangenist, and his sister, Ruth Rodeheaver Thomas, of Roanoke, together with the mission's glee club, will lead the singing at all the services. Mr. Rodeheaver also will preach at the National Baptist Memorial Church at 11 o'clock. Other speakers will be heard at Metropolitan Presbyterian and First Methodist churches.

Fifth Baptist Church Sets Worship Period

The period from tomorrow until November 2 has been set aside by the Fifth Baptist Church as a special period of soul-winning. Dr. J. O. Williams of the Sunday School Board of Nashville, Tenn., will be at Bible school and will preach twice on Sundays and at 9 p. m. during the week intervening. He will also speak on the radio of WWDC Sunday mornings at 8 a. m. and at 11 a. m. each week day.

Dr. Williams

On Sunday morning the Rev. V. M. Hobbs will teach the Darlington-Berea Class, the Rev. J. Herrick Hall the Mooney-Baraca Class and Mrs. Elizabeth Mooney the Philathea Class. Chaplain A. N. Corpening has made a fine beginning with his proposed class of young men who work for the Government departments.

D. C. Girl Scouts To Observe Sunday

Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia will observe Girl Scout Sunday tomorrow at the Washington Cathedral with a special service at 3 p. m.

Preceding the address by the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, Canon Missioner of the Cathedral, the girls will march with their colors to the steps of the choir and will recite the Girl Scout oath and the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States.

The service will precede the regular evensong service at 4 o'clock and will be open to the public.

Sunday Receptions For Men in Service

The Sisterhood and Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, the Council of Jewish Women, and the Service Guild, working in a joint committee and with the cooperation of the Washington Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board tomorrow afternoon will sponsor the first of a series of eight Sunday afternoon entertainments and receptions for the men in the military and naval forces of the United States to be held in the vestry rooms of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, 816 Eighth Street Northwest.

Contract Bridge

Today's questions may have more significance than simply finding the immediate answers.

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠Q875
♡None
◇874
♣KJ8742

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
4 Hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

2. Sitting West, you hold these cards:

♡KJ873
◇765
♣84

East	South	West	North
2 ◇	Pass	?	——

What call do you make?

Answers to Quiz

1. The situation calls for an attacking lead, and the spade five seems the best chance. The club suit is too long for such a lead and, besides, South may lose the club king if he leads away from it. The diamond suit would be a blind and possibly a hopeless stab. If North happens to hold an honor or two in spades, one or two tricks in the suit may be developed. This, with the club king and a very probable trump trick in North's hand, will mean defeat for the adversaries.

2. A two-heart response is West's most suitable call. Although until recently the response to a two bid when a player held one bare high-card trick or less was two no trump, the custom today is to bid your suit, holding any six-card suit or a five-card suit headed by the king or queen-jack, no matter how weak the hand. This response presents a playable trump suit at once and gives the stronger hand an opportunity to declare the no trump if such be the opener's desire.

Trouble on the Marshes, Lively Revue, at Earle

'Ladies in Retirement' a Unique Melodrama, With Ida Lupino, Louis Hayward Costarred; Color and Speed Mark Ace Bill on Stage

"LADIES IN RETIREMENT." Columbia picturization of the stage play by Reginald Denham and Edward Percy, adapted to the screen by Garrett Fort and Mr. Denham, costarring Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward, with Evelyn Keyes, Elsa Lanchester, Edith Barrett, Isobel Elsom, Emma Dunn, Queenie Leonard and Clyde Cook. Directed by Charles Vidor. At the Earle Theater.

IT IS DIFFICULT to detect an acting, directorial or photographic flaw in "Ladies in Retirement," presented yesterday for the first time on a Washington screen at the Earle Theater.

In transcribing a grim and macabre stage play from the footlights to the screen, Lester Cowan and Gilbert Miller, the coproducers; Charles Vidor, the director, and George Barnes, the cinematographer, succeeded in preserving all of its eerie qualities and at the same time accentuating occasional comedy touches that momentarily relieve the starkness of its tragedy. This comedy is not forced or dragged in by the heels, but is derived quietly and unobtrusively from the normal behavior and mental processes of the characters principally involved in the tense situations of which the picture is composed. It is a leavening that makes more palatable a distasteful but fascinating and gripping story.

The scene of the play is an isolated cottage on the marshes not far from London, presided over by a once gay lady who now lives on the bounty of her earlier admirers. Her housekeeper-companion brings to live with them two mentally ailing sisters whose future she feels, finally, can only be insured by the murder of the woman who has taken them in. This murder is first suspected and then reasonably established by a thieving nephew, a fugitive from the law for a bank embezzlement. The conflict thereafter centers on the aunt and her renegade kinsman and in the course of its progress involves exceedingly delicate problems of love, church and state that have been met by most adroit circumlocutions.

Seldom has a drab Victorian mood been captured and sustained with such skill as in this perfectly executed subject. The dim-lit home, the misty reaches of the marshes and every material aspect of the film have been made to harmonize faultlessly with the mental outlooks, conduct and speech of the pivotal characters. The same advanced photographic processes have been employed here as were first disclosed in Orson Welles' revolutionary "Citizen Kane." George Barnes has manipulated them with equal experipess. The direction is such as to create and maintain precisely the right pace in every movement of a drama that might easily be disjointed by a single mistake in tempo, either in action or dialogue. The casting is something for red fire and dancing in the streets.

A Gallery of Stellar Performances

Ida Lupino, as Ellen Creed, willing to kill to assure the freedom and happiness of her child-like sisters, plays the role with a fine blending of iron will and tenderness, never failing to illuminate and lend force to a complex and compelling character. As the sly Albert Feather, the scheming nephew, Louis Hayward brings a sharply contrasting devil-may-care note that is responsible for much of the play's spirit. Quaint comedy that is almost gaily pathetic is inherent in the roles of Emily and Louisa Creed, who live in an innocently irresponsible world of their own. These parts are brilliantly portrayed by Elsa Lanchester and Edith Barrett, who achieves something of a personal triumph in her first screen appearance. Isobel Elsom, also appearing for the first time in an American film, in the role of the murdered woman, is no less distinguished in her work and Evelyn Keyes makes much of the part of the slavey victimized by Albert. Emma Dunn and Clyde Cook are important in the support.

Harry Anger's new stage bill at the Earle provides lively balance for the more somber screen feature. It is a diversified, fast-moving and colorful frolic, sprinkled with unusual acts. Fayne and Foster open with the most skillful musical novelty that has come along in months, involving such supposedly dull things as musical glasses, musical dolls and Swiss bells, to which, somehow, they manage to bring new and exciting life. Jackie Miles, who ambles in and out of the proceedings, is a singing monologist with a nice way about him and the Equillo Brothers are extraordinary acrobatic gentlemen who sing and whistle remarkably well at their work—a feat of lung capacity and breathing that is something. To all of this the Roxyettes contribute several of their most engaging routines, winding up the flashy business with a salute to Navy Day that is a honey.

The newsreel is the only supplementary feature of a program that will appeal to any audience not averse to a little anxiety and mental anguish mixed with its thrills and laughter.

These Are the Ladies Marooned on the Marshes

EDITH BARRETT, IDA LUPINO, ELSA LANCHESTER, ISOBEL ELSOM feminine principals in the Lester Cowan-Gilbert Miller picturization of the stage play, "Ladies in Retirement," now on view as chief screen feature for the week at the Earle Theater. The foremost male role is played by Louis Hayward, in private life husband of Miss Lupino, costarred with him for the first time in this superlatively well-made film

'Great Guns' Finally Fires Salvo at Met

By Richard L. Coe

"GREAT GUNS." Twentieth Century Fox picturization of a screenplay by Lou Breslow, costarring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, with Sheila Ryan, Dick Nelson, Edmund MacDonald, Charles Trowbridge, Ludwig Stossel, Kane Richmond, Mae Marsh, Ethel Griffies, Paul Harvey, Charles Arnt, Pierre Watkin, Russell Hicks and Irving Bacon. Directed by Monty Banks. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Having been out fishing while some of the more recent comedies of Army life have been on view, this reporter possibly enjoyed the Messrs. Laurel and Hardy in "Great Guns" to a greater extent than will those who keep au courant with such contemporary lore. This first effort we have had in some time from The Fat One and The Lean One opened yesterday at the Metropolitan and to a long-term admirer they seemed thoroughly merry and laughable.

To be sure, they hardly seem of Army age and the thought constantly rankles that the board which drafted them should be investigated, but all this is beside the point. They appear to have arrived in Uncle Sam's Army by enlisting, mainly to look after a seemingly frail young man for whom, in civilian life, they serve as gardener and chauffeur. Naturally, the scrapes that befog them are always of the sort that are painful in reality and comical to witness. Naturally, their employer turns out to have an unsuspected force Army life brings to fruition. And, still naturally, the boys turn out to be the heroes in a sham battle.

This earthly triumph is achieved thanks to the ingenuity of one Matilda—or was that her name? M. is a bird, a resourceful black thing which we still feel was a crow, tho' our untutored mind answers it might be a raven. This bird appears at the most awkward times, those moments when a pet is not welcome on the parade grounds of Fort Merritt. At one stage it is pushed into the ample trousers of blimp-like Ollie, there to squirm and cackle during the happiest footage of the film.

"Quiz Kids" Short

The merry men have other moments that will make you laugh out loud, such as a visit they pay on the young lady who is brightening the life of their young charge; their pleasant fashion of drinking tomato juice is bound to have its repercussions on the more loose-minded of the Nation. Altogether, while you may find some of their slapstick dated and not a little forced, "Great Guns" has a generous share of broad, unsophisticated laughter. And Laurel and Hardy are still certainly what the doctor ordered for the kiddies.

Their playmates are not all familiar, though you will find Mae Marsh popping up as one of the hero's doting aunts and such names as Kane Richmond, Paul Harvey, Pierre Watkin, Ethel Griffies and Russel Hicks dotting the cast sheet. Dick Nelson seems to be a pleasant newcomer as the youthful selectee and Sheila Ryan is pertly pretty as his inspiration.

Radio's Quiz Kids are seen in their first screen quiz as the Metropolitan's top short subject. Gerard Darrow gets a special bow in this one, which might have been photographed more effectively with a darker background in which the children's faces wouldn't get lost.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

Capt. James Roosevelt will fly to England within the next few days. He will be accompanied by other members of Col. Donovan's staff, to set up the London branch of the Coordinator of Information . . . George Sylvester Viereck's son has written an anti-Nazi book, as yet unpublished . . . Al Smith was an astute landlord when he entertained the Duke of Windsor at the Empire State Building. After the long round of inspection, Smith suggested to the Duke: "You need a drink, don't you?" and Windsor assented. Smith took him downstairs to the Schenley offices—the largest suite in the building. Al had promised his most important tenant that he'd bring the Duke to their offices.

GROUCHO MARX

At the Empire State Building roof, the Duke posed for a picture showing him looking through the telescope, while surrounded by John J. Raskob and three other millionaires. "It's strange," Windsor reported later, "but when I looked through that telescope I saw nothing—only a blur" . . . None of the millionaires had thought of dropping a dime into the slot of the telescope—the only way to make it operate . . . The Duke and Duchess gave a dinner party for Lady Mendl and others the other night. Eddy Duchin and Hildegrade entertained at the Duke's behest. The songs they asked for were "Last Time I Saw Paris," "You Will Remember Vienna," "Tea for Two" and "Some Day I'll Find You" . . . The Windsors greeted Duchin by asking about his 4-year-old son, Peter. They had been following Peter's progress—for they had known the late Mrs. Duchin.

Louis Jouvet, one of France's best known actors, is en route here from South America . . . Faith Brook, daughter of Clive Brook, the British film star, has been signed for the new Dwight Wiman show, "Letters to Lucerne" . . . Jack Alexander has written an article about Marshall Field for the Saturday Evening Post. The article also will concern Dr. Gregory Zilborg, the psychoanalyst . . . Groucho Marx was introduced to a correspondent who recently returned from Europe. Marx questioned him about the campaign in Russia. "I think Russia will retreat, then hold," said the reporter, "and we'll see a stalemate." Groucho replied: "I'll thank you, sir, to keep my wife out of this conversation."

Bennett Cerf, preparing some new limited-edition bindings for his Random House publications, tells of Sangorski, the most famous bookbinder in Britain. A London nobleman paid Sangorski £2000 for a book-binding. A few days later the nobleman returned with the book, pointed to the elegantly-bound volume and complained: "Look at this. The binding's cracked. A £2000 binding—cracked" . . . Sangorski examined the book, and shook his head. "No wonder the binding cracked," he accused. "You've been READING this book."

Sunday afternoon Lucius Beebe adhered to his usual Sabbath custom. He donned striped trousers, morning coat and high hat, then walked from the Madison Hotel, where he lives, to the Plaza Hotel, where he breakfasts . . . When Beebe started to walk back to his hotel, his way was blocked by a large crowd watching a parade on Fifth Avenue. A policeman quickly came to Lucius' aid. "Follow me, sir," he told the elegantly attired Beebe. "I'll get you through." The cop pushed a path through the mob, with Beebe behind him, and led Lucius to a place where he had to watch the entire parade, about which he still doesn't know. He led Lucius to a seat in the reviewing stand.

The current story is about Dashiell Hammett, who created "The Thin Man," meeting Gypsy Rose Lee, author of the new "G-String Murder Case" . . . "Tell me, Gypsy," asked Hammett, "don't you find writing mystery stories a grind?" . . . "Not so much," she replied, "as the one I used to do in burlesque."

Wanted, a Miracle!

Hollywood, Oct. 24.

Warners certainly have a problem on their hands. They're searching for a 12-year-old who must sing, dance and have the talent to play George M. Cohan at that age. But he must look like Jimmy Cagney, 'cause Cagney's playing Cohan. I wouldn't call that a problem—it'll be a blooming miracle if they find him . . . They're also trying to borrow Spencer Tracy from Metro to play Mark Twain.

"I could understand it, if it had been Lana Turner," said Wally Beery, when he visited Fort Ord, and a thousand candid cameras boys directed their lens on him . . . Jerome Zerbe, society's favorite photographer, will be heading West for some more stars' pictures in the near future. He may arrive with Michael Arlen, who's in America for the British Ministry of Information . . . More socialites heading for our shores are the James A. Moffetts, who will visit Barbara Hutton.

With all the casting being done for "For Whom the Bell Tolls," the two most likely to be in it when it starts tolling are Gary Cooper and Jean Gabin. And perhaps Katharine Cornell.

A kid spotting Jean Parker walking down Hollywood Boulevard started running after her, yelling her name, creating a commotion among passersby. Finally, catching up with her, he held out his hand. "That'll be 20 cents, Miss Parker," said he. "I get 10 cents a block for ballyhooing stars."

Out On A Limb

The indictment of George Hill, second secretary to Representative Hamilton Fish, on two charges of perjury obviously calls for a clearer explanation of the mailbag incident than the Congressman has thus far been willing to give. Indications are that Mr. Hill has been acting under Mr. Fish's directions. It was Representative Fish and not his secretary who denounced The Post for printing the true story of the mailbags. It was Mr. Fish who gave Mr. Hill's version of the story to the House. Now Mr. Hill has been indicted on charges of perjury for presenting the same story to the grand jury.

Mr. Fish told the House that no one in his office accepted the now notorious mailbags hauled away from the office of Prescott Dennett after he was summoned before the grand jury investigating Nazi activities. Those bags contained franked envelopes stuffed with isolationist propaganda. Reports in The Post, which simply detailed the facts, were denounced by Mr. Fish in a speech on September 29 that was made emphatic by free use of such terms as "contemptible," "dastardly," "lying" and "smear." But the grand jury has accepted The Post's version of the story and it has indicted Mr. Hill on a charge of giving false and perjured testimony as to instructions given about removal of the mailbags.

The second count against Mr. Hill may prove to be even more serious. The grand jury alleges that he gave false and perjured testimony to the effect that he did not know George Sylvester Viereck when in fact he did know this registered Nazi agent. Department of Justice prosecutors supplemented the grand jury's allegations by stating before Justice Goldsborough that Mr. Hill admitted receiving $12,000 in the past five months from sources he would not reveal. They told the court that Mr. Hill is the key man in a plot to disseminate propaganda through the mails under the franking privilege.

In conformity with its function of reporting the news, The Post has accurately told the story of Mr. Hill and the mailbags on various occasions. For that service we have been subjected to gross abuse on the floor of the House of Representatives. We naturally look forward to Mr. Fish's explanation with a great deal of interest.

Oil Ban

The abrupt lifting of all restrictions on sales of gasoline in the Atlantic Coast area leaves unsettled the question whether shortages ever were sufficiently serious to warrant resort to rationing. Mr. Ickes cites the improved East Coast inventory position as evidence of the success of his conservation measures. He says these measures have reduced consumption and brought about more intensive use of existing oil transportation facilities. Critics like Senator O'Daniel of Texas, however, insist that the shortage was "manufactured." It was "manufactured," according to Senator O'Daniel, in an abortive attempt to push through pipe-line construction. These critics will doubtless be confirmed in their skepticism by the change of policy. Even the opportune return of the 40 oil tankers transferred to the British service will create doubts as to whether the British really needed all those tankers in the first place.

Certainly the conservation program has produced some good results in spite of the bungling tactics that have been employed in putting it over. It has focused attention upon the transport problems created by a shortage of tankers. It has shown that railway tank cars are capable of much more effective utilization in an emergency. Furthermore, the widespread, voluntary closing of filling stations during the night hours, which was a sequel to the curtailment order, has proved to be a positive boon to gas-station operators. They have become accustomed to the shorter working hours, and do not welcome the prospect of a return to an 18 or 24 hour working schedule. Some of them, indeed, doubt whether they can find men to man their pumps. So, ironically, the sales "blackout," originally accepted as a necessary evil, has come to be regarded as an undisguised blessing.

Here perhaps may be the main residual benefit from the Ickes experiment. Night closing of filling stations releases labor for more essential uses and reduces the strain upon the personnel in charge. Furthermore, experience has shown that the banning of night sales of gasoline causes no serious inconvenience. The public ought, therefore, to do its utmost to support dealers' efforts to retain the "blackout," even though the need for conservation of gas no longer exists. The opportunity occurs in this city as a result of the decision of a large majority of the Washington stations to continue the sales curfew.

Ugly Smudge

Two events that have occurred in the Republican Party this week verify the new ground swell which is reported by the latest Gallup poll in favor of Neutrality Act repeal. One is the Bridges-Austin-Gurney proposal to wipe out this foolish statute. The other is the support of such a move broadcast by over a hundred prominent Republicans at the instigation of Mr. Willkie. The ground swell is the thing that will concern all American conscious of the country's danger from nihilistic Hitlerism. Nevertheless the political implications of the Republican backing are of considerable interest. It had seemed from such testimony as the two-thirds Republican vote in the House against the mere arming of merchantmen as if the G. O. P. were moving toward the grave which awaits all political parties that make a fetish of factionalism. The new move, however, would breathe new life into an opposition which, like all oppositions, aims one day at being the party in power.

There is a future for the Republican Party only so long as it faces the present with the vision and courage of these Republican supporters of the repealer. This it has not done hitherto. It has buried itself in the past, and a past only of its own imagination. Out of the past, for example, are reechoed words which are either mistakenly pinned on George Washington or quoted apart from the context of the Farewell Address. The wording of the famous Farewell Address was extremely careful. "It would be unwise for us," the first President declared, referring to the continent of Europe, "to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities." Notice the qualifying use of "artificial" in connection with the ties to be avoided. Notice, also, the qualification upon the vicissitudes and combinations of which the nursling America should beware—Washington referred to the "ordinary" kind. George Washington was anxious to see this Nation integrated and matured. But, aside from the change that has come over our situation in this respect, it was extravagant to see in his sage advice any ban upon entry into, say, a league of nations. And it is equally absurd to invoke the Farewell Address as warrant for diving into a storm cellar when at a time like the present a tornado is sweeping over the entire world, not Europe alone.

Out of the recent past, too, has been invoked a history which is just as misleading as the Washington tradition. Mr. Willkie says that the Republican Party is the party with a traditional sense of world responsibility. He is right, of course. No Republican of any standing till the famous League debate occurred ever dreamed of invoking the Address as advice for our mature nationhood. In fact, Senator Lodge during the last war said he would not make himself "the subject of derision by quoting from the Farewell Address." At that time Republicans were at the head and front of the League to Enforce Peace, an American organization which was backing a world league with teeth in it. But faction reared its head, and the policy of making a world nearer to the heart's desire was discarded for a rationalized isolationism. It is this "ugly smudge of isolationism," as Mr. Willkie calls it, which is one of the elements responsible for the present stress of both the Nation and the Republican Party. Ours is now a dynamic world, and will be a dynamic world after the war; and only dynamic parties will be able to survive in it. The new Republican move should be the signal to end a futile negativeness which would be fatal to the survival of the party as well as disastrous to the national welfare.

Wage Control

Price Administrator Leon Henderson is quite justified in taking a stand against proposals to establish ceiling prices for all commodities in conformity with Canada's example. As he points out, the administrative problems resulting from this type of legislation are formidable, even for Canada. They would be much more serious for a larger country such as the United States. It is not easy, though possible, to establish an effective control over prices of a limited number of commodities. But it would be a stupendous task—doomed to defeat—to try to maintain, or even to set, price ceilings for the countless articles that are bought and sold daily in the market. As between a selective price-control law that could be enforced and a general price-ceiling measure that would be unenforceable, the choice plainly lies with the former.

Moreover, even if the administrative obstacles to enforcement could be surmounted, there are strong economic objections to a general "freezing" of prices. Price changes are ordinarily the main regulator of productive activity. If all prices were suddenly "frozen," the incentive to speed up production for defense would be weakened, and the Government would be compelled to take strong measures to force more active participation in the defense program. It is easy to see, therefore, why Mr. Henderson stresses the fact that, unlike Canada, we are only partially mobilized for defense—hence in the stage where production for defense still needs to be stimulated by permitting price advances.

Where our Government's price-control plan falls down is not in its rejection of the ceiling-price method. It falls down because of its failure to set up controls for such a basic cost factor as wages. Unless wage rates are stabilized, it is impossible, as the Canadian prime minister has said, to control the prices of finished goods. Protective stabilization of wages does not preclude subsequent adjustments to allow for changes in living costs and increased productivity. It does, however, mean that labor cannot be given free rein to demand successive increases in pay, warranted neither by previous increases in living costs nor by increased productivity.

So far Government agencies have confined their efforts to mediating disputes over demands for wage increases. The difficulties of that task are only a foretaste of the ordeal that is in store for any official or group of officials charged with responsibility for curbing wage demands as part of a program of price control. No wonder Mr. Henderson does not want his organization to be saddled with that task. The job ought to be delegated to a separate but closely coordinated agency. But wage control we must have in order to assure the kind of price control that offers any real safeguard against inflation.

Demand For Copper

The revolution in our economic situation is well typified in copper. Till 1929 the United States not only met its demand for copper from domestic production but also exported large amounts of the metal. In 1942 the demands of the defense program alone (excluding civilian requirements) are estimated to be just about equal to domestic production. With the help of imports, placed at 600,000 tons, the most essential civilian needs, the OPM concludes, can be covered. This would leave about 350,000 tons of copper available to satisfy less essential demands which are capable of absorbing 1,100,000 tons of copper. On the basis of these estimates the drastic nature of the official restrictions imposed upon civilian use of the metal seems to be justified.

There has been some criticism of the OPM because of the limited allowance made for prospective increases in domestic production of copper. Some mines, for instance, are not working 24 hours in the day, or seven days per week. Moreover, it is always possible to stimulate production by raising the ceiling prices which have been set for copper. The Treasury Procurement Division has arranged, for example, to make purchases from three Michigan mines at prices above ceiling levels as a means of stimulating production. Similar concessions could, of course, be used to bring idle mines into production. For the higher the price the Government is willing to pay, the greater the output will be.

There are, of course, various limiting factors that have to be considered before embarking upon such a program to speed up production. Such factors are the adequacy, or otherwise, of smelting and transportation facilities. The OPM believes that all defense requirements for copper can be met and that with the aid of imports there will still be something left over for essential civilian uses. We hope it is right, and that there is no need for either more labor or better prices, or both, in enhancing the pace of production.

Temporary Housing

The Commissioners have proposed the temporary removal of zoning restrictions which now prohibit private homes in certain sections from taking in some of the army of young people who are desperately in quest of adequate shelter in Washington. There should be no delay in putting through the scheme. In World War I, homelike dormitories were built to meet a similar situation. These cluttered up the present Mall area till 1929, when they were finally torn down. The Government has done much during this emergency to increase housing facilities for families both in Washington and in other defense centers. Two permanent Government hotels for women have been projected. Yet no local relief has been afforded young men and women unable to find lodgings reasonably near their offices. One result has been the letting of rooms and apartments in restricted areas, and the Commissioners are wise in seeking to validate this practice.

OPEN HOUSE

My cottage door is open wide
And winds sweep in and out,
There's nothing on my hearth to hide,
Nothing to grieve about;
The sun slants in from every side
And puts each shade to rout.

My cottage smells of salt and pine
And fragrant rows of box,
Of oyster-shells and stinging brine
And tall pink hollyhocks;
Wet sails are drying on the line—
There's not a door that locks.

Amazons Rule Washington

So the Amazons are back in modern history and the few now thoroughly dominated males are relegated to a nonentity in this woman's town. Women, women everywhere on the march, 500,000 strong. They crowd the streetcars and sidewalks, churches, theaters, Government offices and business institutions. And speak of age before beauty—better reverse the line to read, beauty before age, if it stands in the way of expecting a display of grace, charm, respect, modesty, gentility or good manners.

After riding roughshod over the vanquished males they, or some of them, condescend to marry the victims, thus adding to their misery. But babies? "Heavens, no!" What about those stream lines, time off for hair-do's and—social engagements, and denials of nicotine and alcohol to insure purity in baby food? Again, no, a thousand times, no.

Yes, woman (with reservations), thy middle name should be deception. Thou art artificial, from the dyed bobbed hair on thy head to the plucked eyebrows, mascarraed eyelashes, rouged cheeks, crimsoned lips, down to thy painted finger and toe nails.

Sad was the day when men removed the word obey from the marriage rites and the shackles of pots, pans and babies and let women tumble from that pedestal of modesty and mystery, take the bit of emancipation in their teeth and now lead the Nation to where?

Yes, easier to ride a broncho without a J. I. C. bit than to hold the femmes in check without hobbles. But what a boon to cowed men that beauty and wisdom seldom go together; else, now that women are in the saddle, and being ever ruled by the heart and not the head, mere man would be but an incident, and is, anyway.

Yes, these modern Amazons do sing "God Bless America" long and loud, but when it comes to blessing America with a few babies for future soldiers—the work they are really qualified to do well—their patriotism sinks to a low ebb.

Who dares say this? A voice from the old gold and silver West, where men were he men and the women (God bless 'em) once upon a time knew it.

Merit System

Since the United States is a democracy and Washington is the Capital of that democracy, a suggestion for more nearly democratic procedure in Governmental offices would seem to be in order. Too little check is made on bureau chiefs and section heads in departments and agencies. These subbosses make all kinds of efficiency reports on the clerks in their divisions and sections, but the employe never is asked to make an efficiency report on his immediate superior. Why not? I submit that no other person than the humble employe so well knows whether the boss is qualified to deal with subordinates; whether he is a good executive—fair minded, honest, industrious, able. I believe students in many schools and colleges make reports on their instructors and professors, therefore why is this not done in the Government? Knowledge that such reports would be made would keep many a Nazi-minded American bureaucrat from perpetrating petty tyrannies. The board which reviewed the anonymous reports on the boss would, of course, make allowances for a certain percentage of malice from the lower strata, but the sum total and average of the reports would make it clear if the man or woman in question was really a boss of ability.

Obviously, such procedure could not well take place in the Army of even a democratic country. But it can and should, it would seem, take place in the civil service, which is theoretically devoted to merit and merit alone.

Brazilian Traffic Plan

Relative to the traffic problem here in Washington, I would like to submit the following plan used in Brazil for a number of years—and I am informed this plan has worked out satisfactorily.

A recent tenant of mine who represented the Brazilian government in a special study here (not related in any way to the traffic problem), told me that in Rio all government clerks reported at 11 a. m. and remained on duty until 7 p. m. with one-half hour off for lunch.

In this way all school children, regular office workers, factory employes and shoppers were "cleared" before the hordes of government clerks came on the scene. And in the evening the same traffic was "cleared" before the government clerks started home.

I see many advantages in this program. With so many women trying to combine a home with a job, this 11 o'clock schedule would give them a splendid opportunity to organize—and enjoy their home for the day—shopping, cleaning, preparation of the evening meal, etc. Those without homes would enjoy some extra sleep! Of course, I concede a lot of readjustments would follow the adoption of such a plan in this country. And I do not think the difference in time in these United States would be a serious hindrance to such a plan—certainly it would bring the hours of Government offices in Chicago, Denver and San Francisco more in line with Washington than they are at present.

I am glad to submit this plan for your consideration. Incidentally, I was told this schedule was submitted to the government clerks in Rio and it was adopted by their vote.

Vermont Statesmen

Vermont deserves a vote of thanks from the Republican Party for the leadership her statesmen are providing. Senator Austin's part in introducing a resolution to repeal the Neutrality Act, Representative Plumley's vigorous support of the arming of merchant ships and Gov. Wills' call for a party caucus to end obstruction of national defense are all encouraging signs that the traditional Republican foreign policy proclaimed by Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root and William Howard Taft will again prevail in party councils.

Ohio, mother of Republican Presidents, presents a marked contrast with Vermont. The Buckeye State, which has been the birthplace of 7 of the 12 Republican occupants of the White House since Lincoln, now has a Republican Governor and two Republican Senators, while half of its 24 Congressmen are also Republicans. Of that group, only one has publicly admitted that the greatest Nation on earth should concern itself with world affairs; the others are divided into two groups, those who are declared isolationists and those who refuse to say where they stand. The firm conviction of the late William Howard Taft, great Ohio statesman and authority on international affairs, that the United States must use force, when necessary, to attain and keep peace among all nations, has been repudiated not only in his own State but even in his own household. A Republican may again be elected President, but that Republican is not likely to come from Ohio.

Experts Not Needed

Permit me to heartily second the ideas of Mr. C. L. Chapin published in his letter of October 21 and entitled "Private Driver Cites Traffic Cures." I have been interested in traffic matters in Washington for a number of years and it's my considered belief that 80 per cent of our traffic difficulties could be solved by the addition of 100 well trained, efficiently disciplined motorcycle officers constantly on the move through the streets of Washington.

This hysterical mania for bringing to the city experts who will tell us things that our own experts have already told us is a useless expenditure of money and results in a continual postponement of any accomplishment. The same thing can be said for the continual Congressional investigations, to whose repeated recommendations Congress pays not the slightest attention.

In this connection it is interesting to note that one of the two experts whom it is proposed to bring here from New York told me this summer that Mayor LaGuardia keeps his fingers off the police department, including the traffic enforcement division of it; that Commissioner Valentine ran it without any politics and that you couldn't "fix" a traffic ticket. Perhaps Congress and the Commissioners might learn something from those statements, which could be secured by mail, under a Congressional frank probably.

Neutrality Repeal

Before the threat of Hitlerism becomes a stark reality in the United States of America, I, along with the great masses of the American people demand that the Neutrality Act be repealed and we send immediate and sufficient aid to U. S. S. R. and Great Britain who are staging such a brave battle to crush Hitlerism with its ever-present menace to our freedom and liberty.

DORIS RUBIN.
Washington, Oct. 22.

The equivocal position of our Government in expending billions to thwart the inhuman aggression of the Nazis while we retain our Neutrality Act on the books is patent. That it is indefensible every citizen knows, for it saps our self-respect as a people and justifies the charge of hypocrisy which the suffering folk of oppressed Europe and the East are tempted to make against us. The repeal of the Neutrality Act is indispensable to America's honor.

Traditional Course Best?

Do you think that when the enemy shoots us and we shoot the enemy that is war, whether it be on land or on the high seas?

Can you doubt that it is war when the shooting is not casual, is not upon the order of subordinates, but upon orders still in effect given by our President and the Fuehrer of Germany?

If war it be and war it is, should the United States, in imitation of Germany and Japan, dispense with any declaration of its existence?

Or should the United States follow its own traditional course and declare that war now exists between the United States and Germany by virtue of the acts of war committed by Germany?

Will that declaration expose us to any danger to which we are not now exposed?

Will it not rather make the American people realize our dangers, quicken our efforts and make victory more certain?

Home-Grown Worms

Someone asked the question, "Why, in view of our silk shortage, we United States don't learn to raise silkworms."

He didn't know that some Georgetown boys tried it a good many years ago, thinking to make a tidy sum during their summer vacation. Maybe if we told how many years ago, you'd be surprised. This zoological experiment was made in the days when there was in Georgetown an area known as "Cooks Park," where grew many osage orange bushes and mulberry trees.

The United States Department of Agriculture had made announcement through a local newspaper that it would give to anyone who wanted them a certain number of silkworm larvae, to be fed and cared for by the recipient, and when the silkworms were mature and had completed their cocoons, the department would buy them back at a certain figure.

This particular group of boys (the name of one of them makes front page news today) determined to avail themselves of the Government's generous offer and accordingly presented themselves at the proper office; each was given a small tin box containing a number of larvae. They returned home on the horse car, told of their business venture and demanded a place for their animal industry. They explained their need for a considerable space where the little eggs might be spread out and quantities of branches of trees put for them to feed on.

The mother of one of them, an optimistic soul when boys were concerned, said yes, they could have the top one of several shelves that ran around her old-fashioned kitchen. She directed the cook to remove some seldom-used pots and pans. The boys climbed up on kitchen chairs in order to cover the shelf with newspapers, spread out the embryo worms, fetched osage orange bushes from Cooks Park, which was only two blocks away, and spent the remainder of the day discussing what each fellow meant to do with the money he expected to make.

Day after day the trips to the park were taken, each time a larger quantity of leafage was needed by the growing silkworms, until before the end of the month, the four youngsters coming down what in those days was Washington Street, looked like "the woods of Dunsinane" advancing toward their foe.

The boys got tired, the days grew hotter, and the silkworms ate more and more as they wove themselves into their beautiful big cocoons.

I was the sister of one of the industrialists and it was in our kitchen that the experiment took place. At one stage the worms ate so ravenously, making such a clicking noise as they ate, that one might have thought there was a grandmother with her knitting needles sitting up there on the top shelf.

Some of the neighbors asked the indulgent mother if she was not afraid that the worms would drop off the shelf into the food, but she just laughed and shook her head.

Finally the evolution of the cocoons was complete. The boys, handling them as carefully as if they were gold nuggets, put them into pasteboard boxes and made their trek to the Agricultural Department to claim their hard-earned cash.

As I remember, the care and feeding of these infants had occupied about five or six weeks.

The United States Government paid the young quartet $10 for their products, which gave each boy $2.50 for his weeks of labor. That seemed much larger to boys of those days than it would today. But even then I can remember what an atmosphere of gloom pervaded the group when they hopped off the streetcar in front of our house. And it took a whole freezer of homemade lemon water ice, served in the back yard by the indulgent mother, to raise their spirits.

They said they didn't believe it paid to raise silkworms.

Hiring Victory

The ironies of fate can make monkeys out of nations as well as of men. Great Britain once tried to save her American colonies with hired Hessians (Germans). Too rich and too fat to fight, the hirer lost.

Now, that same Britain (irony though it be) is "lend-leased" hired by those same colonies to save them and their cherished democracy from Hessian slavery of the 1941 variety. Such irony! America the proud, who boasts she has never lost a fight, coddling the notion she can "lend-lease" her self-preservation. Futile, wistful thinking as modern European slavery loudly proclaims.

America, you licked the hired Hessians in your youth to gain your right to life and freedom. You helped lick them again in 1917 to keep your precious heritage. Once more the call is upon you. Duck the job and your days are numbered and you, too, will goosestep as slaves to those whose ears you have twice pinned back.

The British, the Norse, the Poles, the Greeks, the Chinese, the Russians, challenge admiration, for they have dared to stand and fight. Wake up, America, and fight, lest the ironies of fate lay you low by the hand of Hessian slaves. Shall slaves make slaves of free men? God forbid! Let's stay free, America, or shoot it out while trying. We admire even the bandit who does that for his freedom. ANONYMOUS.

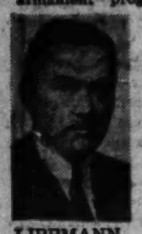
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Russian Campaign And America's Task

FOR THIS COUNTRY the main conclusion to be drawn from the Russian campaign is that our armament program must be greatly expanded.



LIPPMANN

This conclusion can no longer be altered by military developments on the Russian front. The fundamental facts will remain, which are that Hitler has occupied or immobilized most of the industrial resources of European Russia, and that for some time to come he has blunted if he has not destroyed the threat of a Russian offensive power in eastern and central Europe.

On the other hand, Hitler is further than ever from a position where he could, even if he wished it, propose any kind of negotiable peace. From one end of Hitler's Europe to the other the relations between Hitler and his victims has become one of such deadly, irreconcilable enmity that no demobilization of the German military machine is now conceivable.

BETWEEN THE RUSSIANS and the Germans the bridges have been burned; the evidence for that is the decision to defend Moscow but to evacuate the government, the decision to destroy what cannot be removed into the interior, and last but by no means the least significant—the realistic moderation of Stalin's demands on the British and the Americans. These are the actions of a government which would seem to have no idea of attempting to follow the course of Marshal Petain and the Vichy government.

Between the Germans and the French the bridges are burning, and Hitler must now know that the possibility of voluntary collaboration by the French people has vanished. Even with his armies in occupation of France he cannot police the country effectively enough to protect the lives of his soldiers, or to prevent continual terrorism and sabotage. Thus he can never withdraw his armies from France and still have any hope whatever that Marshal Petain or Admiral Darlan or anyone else would or could "collaborate" with Nazi Germany. The chasm is unbridgeable because between the Nazis and the French there is now a record of inexpiable horrors.

HITLER is master of a continent which he cannot govern except by incessant and ruthless violence. Therefore, he can never demobilize. And since he cannot demobilize, he must extract from Europe every last resource of materials and man power that can be mobilized for war, and he must plan new and still more far-flung campaigns of conquest in the hope of finding some way to break all resistance outside his empire and within it.

Thus, with the occupation of the industrial centers of European Russia, the preponderant bulk of the industrial capacity of the world is now divided between Hitler on the one hand, America and Britain on the other. It is certain beyond the possibility of dispute that Hitler must and that Hitler will devote his half of the world's industrial capacity to war production. It is, therefore, imperative—no matter what view one takes on all other questions of the strategy of the conflict—that the American arsenal alone should develop a capacity that is clearly superior to that of the whole of Hitler's Europe. This is a conclusion which Americans must reach regardless of whether they want only an "impregnable" defense of the Western Hemisphere, or whether they want to negotiate a stalemate peace, or whether they want to aid the Allies, or whether they want to fight Hitler and defeat him. On any assumption which Americans now make there is fundamental common ground in the fact that an armament capacity superior to Hitler's Europe is indispensable.

ON THIS MATTER there can be no substantial difference of view between the intelligent isolationists and the realistic interventionists. For suppose we followed the advice of the isolationists, abandoned Europe to Hitler, and urged Britain to come to terms with him: could we, thereafter, conceivably negotiate with Hitler on any terms of equality if behind him there were mobilized for total war the whole resources of the Old World, while we had mobilized only 15 to 25 per cent of our resources? As against his tanks, airplanes, submarines, and his fiercely disciplined legions, what would be the bargaining value of our new automobiles, refrigerators, office buildings, hotels, plumbing fixtures and the thousand and one other conveniences and gadgets to which we have become accustomed? No one can be an intelligent isolationist and not recognize that the unavoidable logic of his position commits him to an armament program in which the total capacity of America alone, of an isolated America, is superior to that of Hitler and all his allies and vassals.

It does not matter whether we mean to fight a total war against Hitler or whether we merely mean to survive alone in a world where Hitler is mobilized for total war, the conclusion is the same. Before Hitler can organize his European conquests and long before he can establish any kind of control over the outposts and approaches of the Western Hemisphere, there must exist on this continent an organized war production that is beyond doubt decisively greater than Hitler's. Nothing less than that is adequate even for a passive defense. Nothing less than that is sufficient for a victorious defense that would lead to peace and a genuine demobilization.

IT IS to this conclusion that we must address our principal effort. What can be done immediately in Russia must be done chiefly by the Russians themselves, and to their everlasting credit, they have proved that they know it, facing the fury of the assault without flinching or complaining, asking nothing of their partners which is impossible and, therefore, meant, like M. Reynaud's plea of June 1940, as a maneuver to cover their own defeatism. So, without minimizing the material and the psychological importance of keeping open the supply routes into Russia, and of sending over them what can be sent as rapidly as possible, the vitally important contribution of America, and the most convincing action it can take, is to lay down at once a greatly expanded program of arms production.

The Russian resistance, which is invaluable to our own defense both in the Atlantic and in the Orient, rests on the view that this struggle will not be decided by pitched battles but by the mobilization of the superior resources of the anti-Hitler coalition. Thus the Russian resistance is not suicidal but rational provided that we, the greatest and least vulnerable member of the coalition, do in fact mobilize our power. The Russians, we now see, are not the dreaming Slavs of the romantic legends, but when put to the test, they are as realistic as they are brave. The most powerful support we can give them, now at this moment, is to prove by acts that we are mobilizing our power, not partially, not 25 per cent of it, but all of it that can be mobilized.

THIS IS A STRUGGLE in which nothing can be improvised, where everything that is done has been prepared long in advance. For this is a war of complicated machines operated by highly skilled men. In general it may be said that the result of any campaign is determined by what was planned and accomplished in the preceding 18 months. Thus the Allied disaster in the spring of 1940 was prepared in the winter of 1938-39 by the failure of the British and the French to order enough equipment and by our own failure to repeal the arms embargo. That was when the necessary airplanes and tanks and guns were not ordered. The inability of the British to take the offensive now is due to the fact that in the summer of 1940, they lacked the money to order enough tanks and planes while we did not get around to lend-lease until seven months ago.

The program we adopted last winter will not be producing the full effect until the end of next year. Because of this time lag, it is of the utmost importance that there should be no administrative delay and no political obstruction in adopting the greatly expanded program which the President has promised.

IT WILL TAKE Hitler time to organize and exploit his Russian conquests. It will take us time to organize our own production. Our greatest task is to make sure that in this race between Hitler, who will be organizing all of Europe, and the Americans, who should be organizing a continent, we come out indisputably on top.

If there is anything we can do, this surely is it. So we must do it. For no one, neither the people abroad nor Americans in the future, will ever forgive us if, possessing the greatest industrial capacity in the history of mankind, we are too selfish, too lazy, too befuddled by politics and personalities, to mobilize our matchless wealth for the defense of human liberty.

Democratic Dictator

PRESIDENT GETULIO VARGAS of Brazil, who will complete 11 years of government on November 3, is one of the most democratic leaders in South America. The people of Brazil have kept him on the job because they like him and because they feel that Vargas gave the country what it needed in less than two years of government and since then has made a new Brazil come to life. And, the Brazilians conclude: "there is no reason why we should not stand for Vargas and his administration."

Visiting American tourists to Rio de Janeiro, on hearing such declarations, are still doubtful. They have heard of people afraid to express opinions while living under dictatorships; and, to make sure, they ask if it is hard to see the President in person.

"Don Getulio?" the Brazilian will ask in wonderment, "sure, you may see him any day. Every day he walks from his residence to his office. All you have to do is to stand on the corner of one of the streets that run from the Palacio Guanabara to the Palacio da Catete."

And so it is. Everyone knows of the President's daily stroll accompanied by one of his military aides. His few minutes' walk sometimes lasts an hour, for he gives liberal street-audiences to people who want to shake his hand or make a request or complaint. And he has an excellent memory when it comes to keeping promises.

People like President Vargas because he is really democratic.

THE BORDER between Chile and the Argentine is over 2000 miles long. It is a strange border that on the map looks like a line drawn by a 2-year-old child until it reaches Patagonia, where two very straight lines define sharply the two countries. These two lines were drawn by Queen Victoria of England when she agreed to serve as arbitrator in an old border dispute between the two countries. The rest of the border has been marked by nature for the highest peaks of the Andes Mountains form the natural limit.

There are no forts to protect this extensive boundary and numerous passes, some official and others only known to the professional smuggler of cattle or merchandise, or shady traveler. It is here that the activities of the Argentine gendarmes and Chilean Carabineros are of great importance. The latter are already well known among American horse-show enthusiasts. The Carabineros took with them back to Chile some of the most desirable prizes in the last horse shows in Virginia and Madison Square Garden of New York, which is easy to understand if we look into their activities in Chile.

An American would compare this mounted police to the legendary Red Coats or Canadian mounties. Covered with their enormous "ponchos" made of thick, black alpaca, the Carabineros ride their little Chilean horses along the passes and narrow paths known only to them and the law-breakers. A Mauser carbine and pistol and a heavy saber are their armaments. Their posts are in far-apart places called "retenes," so that more often than not they sleep under the clear sky of the icy Andes Mountains, or in the houses of some isolated hacienda. Living far away from civilization, their job is more than just that of policemen. Lonesome cattle ranchers welcome them as news bearers, use them as messengers in trusted and often dangerous missions of collecting cash to meet pay-roll obligations.

Always in pairs, these Carabineros live on horseback, sometimes remaining in the saddle for days and nights, following a suspicious trail that may spell doom to an enterprising smuggler. They have to be good riders for the terrain is the wildest one can imagine.

It is a pity that we shall not have an opportunity to see them again this year in the States. The government of Chile thinks that present times are not for showy display of horsemanship but for intensified activities in the homeland.

DR. POLICARPO ARTAZA, of Paraguay, director of a radio station, newspaperman and a member of the Paraguayan Parliament, commenting upon the value of radio as a tool of war and propaganda in the present World War, recalled some stirring episodes in which radio played a dramatic part.

Everyone remembers that the Chaco War between Paraguay and Bolivia was one of the bloodiest ever fought. The climate of the Chaco extracted as many victims as bullets and shrapnel did. Troops were isolated for months in islands, surrounded not by water but by tropical swamps, waiting for the dry season to arrive. There were no ways to communicate with the outside world. The government of Paraguay organized in its capital, Asuncion, the "Hora Chaco"—the Chaco Hour. Mothers and wives of soldiers in the "front"—the wilderness of the Chaco—were allowed each day two minutes to speak to their relatives. Most of the speakers were women who had never heard a broadcast and knew nothing of radio, people from the most humble Indian class.

Spoke a young bride: "Manuel, do you hear me? They tell me that my words are reaching you, that my voice goes over the air, very high . . . Do you think God can hear me saying that I want you back? Do come back but come back victorious . . ."

An old mother: "Juan, how are you? Are you hurt? Answer me please, please!" The announcer informed the woman that her son was listening but could not reply, instructed her to say that she was well, that she was in no need. The woman showed herself incredulous and just wept into the microphone.

Berlin Diary

INSTALLMENT XIII

German Army in Action

(May 21-28, 1940)

AACHEN, MAY 21, 1940—Finally got to the actual front today and saw my first battle—along the Scheldt River in western Belgium.

About noon we reached Enghien and drove to the headquarters of Gen. von Reichenau, commander of the Sixth Army. Headquarters were in a chateau not far from the town.

SHIRER

Reichenau, whom I had seen occasionally in Berlin before the war, greeted us on the porch, his invariable monocle squeezed over one eye. With typical German thoroughness and with an apparent frankness that surprised me, he went over the operations thus far.

Despite the German successes up to date, Reichenau emphasized to us that the fighting so far had been only an enveloping movement, and that the decisive battle had yet to take place.

"When and where?" I asked him.

"Where," he laughed, "depends partly on what the enemy does. When, and how long it will last, I leave to the future. It can be short or long."

Reichenau admitted that "possibly our progress will now be slowed up if Weygand decides to make a grand stand."

Some further quotations from Reichenau I noted down roughly:

"Hitler is actually directing the German army from his headquarters. Most of the blowing up of bridges and roads in Belgium carried out by French specialists . . . I ride 150 miles a day along the front and I haven't seen an airfight yet. We've certainly been surprised that the Allies didn't try at least to bomb our bridges over the Maas River and the Albert Canal. The British tried it only once in the daytime. We shot down eighteen of them. But there seems to be no doubt that the English are holding back with their air force. At least that's the impression I get."

And I got the impression that this rather bothered him!

The general is in an almost jovial mood. He is not tense. You wonder: "Have these German generals no nerves?" Because, after all, he is directing a large army in an important battle. A few miles down the road two million men are trying to slaughter one another. He bosses almost a million of them.

He turns us over to his adjutant. Then off to the front.

Soon we hear the distant rumble of artillery. We speed down the dusty road past endless German columns of trucks carrying troops, carrying ammunition, carrying all-important oil, hauling guns, big and small.

Our party is a little tense now as we go forward. We proceed north, parallel with the front, and back of it about 5 miles to Renaix, hurry through the town, and then north towards the Scheldt River, where they're fighting.

Infantry on foot are deploying down various paths toward the river. Heavy artillery—and this is amazing to see—six-inch guns, pulled by caterpillar trucks, and on rubber tires, are being hauled up a hillside at forty miles an hour. (Is this one of the German military secrets, such big guns being hauled so fast?)

Finally we stop. A battery of 6-inch guns, concealed under trees in an orchard at the right of the road, is pounding away. Now we have a view over the valley of the Scheldt and can see the slopes on the other side. The artillery thunders, and a second later you see the smoke from the shells on the far slopes. An officer explains they're bombarding the roads behind the enemy lines.

We climb a hill beyond the artillery positions, so that they are now behind us, firing over our heads. We sit on a slope and look through the trees toward the front line.

But it's disappointing. You see so little, actually. You cannot make out the infantry or what they're doing. An officer explains they're fighting along the river there below. The Allies still hold both banks, but are retreating across the Scheldt. The only evidence you have of infantry fighting is that the German artillery barrage advances.

So far we haven't heard much of the artillery as a factor in the Germans amazing progress. The work of the Stuka bombers took most of our attention. But it's obvious that this German motorized artillery, brought up to positions right behind the advancing tanks at 40 miles per hour, is a tremendous factor. The Allies probably had not reckoned that artillery could move so fast.

I note that over the front all afternoon hover two or three reconnaissance planes, German, obviously directing artillery fire. They cruise above the battlefield unmolested. But there are no planes directing Allied artillery fire, which seems to be aimed exclusively against the German forward positions, at no time against German artillery, which is strange. The lack of observation planes alone puts the Allies in a hole.

As the afternoon wears away to the pounding of the guns, artillery units near us get orders to take up new positions forward. The advance, you suppose, is going ahead according to schedule.

We take a last look at the Scheldt Valley, at the smoke rising from the bursting shells on the other side of the river. Probably it all has meaning for these German officers around us. Each whistling shell has a certain errand. Each gun and truck rushing down the road is going to some place assigned to it. The whole chaos (to me) of the battlefield is in reality a picture of a well-oiled machine of destruction in action.

BERLIN, May 24—Two weeks ago today Hitler unloosed his britzkrieg in the West. Since then this has happened: Holland overrun; four fifths of Belgium occupied; the French army hurled back towards Paris; and an Allied army believed to number a million men trapped and encircled on the Channel.

You have to see the German army in action to believe it. Here are some of the things, so far as I could see, that make it good:

It has absolute air superiority. It seems incredible, but at the front I did not see a single Allied plane during the daytime. Stuka dive-bombers are softening the Allied defense positions, making them ripe for an easy attack. Also, they're wrecking Allied communications in the rear, bombing roads filled with trucks, tanks and guns, wiping out strategic railroad stations and junctions. Furthermore, reconnaissance planes are giving the German command a perfect picture of what is going on. Against this, the Allies have no eyes, few of their reconnaissance planes get over.

Also, Allied bombers have completely failed to disturb German lines of communication by daytime attacks. One of the sights that overwhelms you at the front is the vast scale on which the Germans bring up men, guns and supplies unhindered. All day long, driving along at 40 or 50 miles an hour, you pass unending mechanized columns. What magnificent targets these endless columns would make if the Allies had any planes!

And what a magnificent machine that keeps them running so smoothly. Directly behind the front, with the guns pounding daylight out of your ears and the airplanes roaring overhead, officers and men alike remain cool and business-like. Absolutely no excitement, no tension.

Morale of the German troops is fantastically good. I remember a company of engineers which was about to go down to the Scheldt River to lay a pontoon bridge under enemy fire. The men were reclining on the edge of the wood reading the day's edition of the army daily paper, the Western Front.

The contention of the B.B.C. that these flying German columns—such as the one that broke through to the sea at Abbeville—are weak forces which cannot possibly hold what they get, is a myth. The Germans thrust not only with tanks and a few motorized infantry, but with everything. Light and heavy motorized artillery goes right up behind the tanks and infantry.

BERLIN, May 28.—King Leopold has quit on the Allies. At dawn the Belgian army, which with the British and French has been caught in an ever narrowing pocket for a week in Flanders and Artois, laid down its arms. Leopold during the night had sent an emissary to the German lines asking for an armistice. The Germans demanded unconditional surrender. Leopold accepted.

The three armies together had a small chance of fighting their way out. With half a million excellent Belgian troops out of the picture, the fate of the French and British armies, it would seem, is sealed.

U. S. Secret Weapons

Scientists at Work

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (INS).—Dr. Vannevar Bush, director of the U. S. Office of Scientific Research and Development, and president of Carnegie Institution, revealed today that American scientists are forging secret weapons of the utmost importance for national defense.

The famous scientist was the guest speaker of a joint session of the Optical Society of America, the Acoustical Society of America, and the Society of Rheology. He was unable to disclose details of how the scientists were developing new weapons, but revealed:

"Fully 75 per cent of all American physicists and 50 per cent of the chemists are now directly engaged in science for defense. The remaining scientists are ready for such service as soon as called.

"Discoveries and inventions have been put to use within one year, while ordinarily it takes at least three years before new developments in science are applied in practical ways."

LIEUT. (JG) STANLEY S. BALLARD, U. S. N., stressed the heavy burden of responsibility which fine glass instruments would play in any defense of these shores.

Lieut. Ballard is in the research and development division of the Bureau of Ordnance.

"We need more range finders, telescopes and gun sights than can be produced even by this country's greatly expanded optical industry," he asserted. "The bottleneck is not so much in raw materials as it is in machinery and men for producing the finished products."

Highly specialized microscopes and other optical instruments are proving indispensable in sabotage and espionage investigations, the scientific conference heard from Walter Driscoll, laboratory expert o fthe Federal Bureau of Investigation.

IN HIS PREPARED ADDRESS, he described technical methods which were employed to solve the mysterious wrecking of a passenger train and tampering with a Navy experimental plane.

Another speaker in the defense symposium was Frederick Bates, of the National Bureau of Standards, who pointed out that skyrocketing military and industrial needs have resulted in unprecedented demand for optical crystals.

Despite the recent discovery of new quartz deposits in the United States, the greatly expanded quartz mines of Brazil are still the chief source of this indispensable raw material, said Bates.

Hat Makers Fear Hatless Windsor May Set a Style

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—The hatless habit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are troubling the Nation's hatters.

The duke is more of a problem than the duchess. Only once since he came to New York has he been seen with a hat, and then he carried it under his arm.

A representative of a group of hat manufacturers finally took pen in hand and pointed out to the duke that, by setting a style precedent of hatlessness, might injure the business of approximately a million people who he said depend on men's hats for a living.

While the Duchess remained at her hotel today, the duke flew to Hartford, Conn., where he toured the United Aircraft Corporation's Pratt and Whitney and Hamilton standard propeller divisions.

Fair Enough

A Warning To Trade Unions

THIS ARTICLE will be largely composed of direct quotes from an address by Mrs. Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor, to the recent convention in Seattle of the American Federation of Labor and, as entertainment, will assay well below the old statutory maximum of 3.2, by volume. I present these excerpts in relief, so to speak, because Mrs. Perkins' address ran as long as a hack-driver's dream and, being so long and dull, political and mealy, was not adequately covered in the papers at the time.

PEGLER

For all but one paragraph of six pages of double-space, Mrs. Perkins kicked the gong around while the toss-pot contingent doubtless were holed away in some $50-a-day suite dramming it up and the elderly liver and cardiac cases snoozed stupidly in their chairs, impersonating a respectful quorum. But Mrs. Perkins had lathered the boys heavily with the standardized and meaningless praise that politicians always use on the bosses of the unions, she outs with her razor and drew gore from their liverish jowls as you will see.

Said she, in part, said she:

"A great change has taken place in the status of trade-unionism in America. Today everyone expects that trade-unions will participate in the councils of our Government along with employers, farmers and other groups. The advice of labor is sought not only on questions of wages and working conditions but on the broad economic and social problems of the national life. Most of the important parts of American life are conducted by groups, privately organized, but taking public responsibilitiey."

HERE she mentioned the religious bodies, the Bar Association, the American Medical Association, and so forth as "real institutions" which determine policy and ethics within their field. Some "institutions" of this general character, she said, had lost public confidence and this loss has resulted in regulation of the railroads, which she described as "private enterprise fraught with public interests," the telephone and telegraph, the stock exchanges and banks.

"Trade-unionism," she then said, "has accepted social responsibilities and its policies in the future must be predicated not only on the welfare of its own members but on the welfare of all the people."

I am quoting selectively but without impairing the sense of Mrs. Perkins' remarks and I find as I go along that I must be sparing with direct quote and condense because she is so long-winded. She should have had some training filing cables at two-bits a word, as I did.

"LABOR'S STRUGGLE for the right to organize is practically over," Mrs. Perkins said, and this statutory protection gives trade-unionism a "great responsibility."

"It has placed labor in the same exposed position as many of the other great American private associations charged with public responsibilities; responsibilities to the whole people for sound, intelligent, economic, social and moral practices and for the selection of leaders who can be trusted not only by their members but by the Government, the employers and the people, and responsibilities to avoid excesses of action and to regard the rights of others considerately, whether they agree or not.

"The public attitudes and private methods of unions are today matters of public interest and significance," she said. Trade-unionism must expect to be judged as other institutions are judged, and will "now be kept constantly under what we may term social surveillance. The public demands certain standards. First and foremost, the public expects its service institutions to exercise the utmost order and exemplary procedure in handling other people's money. The scrupulous account for money, regular, independent and public audits of all moneys, including insurance funds, dues, assessments and so forth, is bound to be expected and should be done voluntarily rather than under compulsion."

At this point the hod carriers, the movie employes and a spy from Wrong John Lewis' United Mine Workers of the C. I. O., collapsed in piteous, shapeless heaps.

"THE PUBLIC expects," Mrs. Perkins muttered on, "that unions will be operated in a parliamentary way; expects the officers to be chosen in the fairest and most open way and believes those unions have been wise who have required American citizenship of their officers.

"There are a certain number of individuals who are nonjoiners by nature, but these people are also human beings with the rights and dignity of human personality. Provision must be made for toleration and flexibility for just those groups. I agree that unions make a mistake in insisting on a closed shop where it cannot be won as a matter of relatively comfortable agreement between employers and the unions."

This, my friends, was historic talk, the first warning by the New Deal Government that the political weather-takers of the Administration sensed abrewing in the land a hurricane of fury against the outrageous larceny, arrogance and bloody brutality of the brown shirts brought to power by the encouragement of President Roosevelt and Mrs. Perkins herself.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 24.—Charles A. Lindbergh raised an issue which has provoked wide discussion when he named recently the groups which, in his opinion, are most active in trying to get the country into war. He declared that they were the Roosevelt Administration, the Jews and the British.

To find out what groups are most clearly identified in the public mind with outright intervention, and what groups are most clearly identified with keeping the country out of war, the American Institute has just completed a public opinion poll in which the following two questions were asked:

"What persons or groups do you think are most active in trying to keep us out of war?"

"What persons or groups do you think are most active in trying to get us into war?"

No check-list was given to voters interviewed; their answers were entirely spontaneous.

The results reveal a number of interesting facts, particularly in respect to groups considered active in promoting war.

Only one person in 16 mentioned the Jews, with the result that this group ranks no higher than fifth among the groups identified in the public mind as most active for war.

The greatest number—one in every 5—mentioned the Roosevelt Administration. British and Allied agents in this country received fewer mentions than business industrialists and profiteers," who were ranked second in importance. Only a small group of voters mentioned the Fight for Freedom Committee.

The results follow:

Groups considered most active in trying to get United States into war:

(Ranked in order of mention)

1. Roosevelt Administration and Democratic Party.
2. Big Business, industrialists, profiteers.
3. British organizations and agents.
4. American organizations with pro-British sympathies.
5. Jews.

Groups considered most active in trying to keep United States out of war:

(Ranked in order of mention)

1. Lindbergh, Wheeler, Nye.
2. America First Committee.
3. Roosevelt Administration.
4. Nazi agents and Fifth Columnists.
5. Church groups and organizations.

It is noteworthy that the Roosevelt Administration appears prominently in both lists, being considered by some voters as active for war, and by others almost as large in number as trying to keep us out of war.

The Republican Party as a party was mentioned by only a small number—fewer than 2 per cent—as most active in trying to prevent war.

DRUM MAJORETTES STRUT AS BAND PLAYS FOR THE CROWD

Students Stage Cooperative Carnival

One thousand Elliot Junior High School student yesterday turned cooperative heat on the problem of getting new strings for the school's badminton racquets, new records for the phonograph and fineries for the band.

Each class sponsored something to go into the carnival to raise the money for the badminton racquets, phonograph records and band fineries. And they evolved a practical lesson in the law of give and take, or how to practice self-sacrifice while still gorging on hot dogs, having ponies to ride and getting equipment for the school.

For example—the occasion filled the school's playground with 1000 children from the school and 50 from the neighborhood. One class provided 75 pounds of peanuts for the carnival. Then, having bought the 75 pounds of peanuts collectively, the children bought them back at 5 cents a bag, the profit going toward the equipment they wanted and leaving them also full of peanuts.

There was a slight discrepancy in the audit of the hot dogs, mustard and relish. The stand could not be approached in the crush of business but someone behind the counter yelled over that 420 had been eaten in 40 minutes. The school authorities said word had come through that the number was 360.

Fortune-tellers Elaine Norris and Vivian Wilkinson, tangled in life lines, couldn't do quite so large a business by time the carnival ended at 3:30 p. m.

Pony rides totaled 140; about a dozen layer cakes were eaten, and a 5-cent admission dance in the gymnasium did well.

The children ran out of hot dogs and will concentrate on them next year by getting a thousand.

German Penetration of Russia—Shading indicates German penetration of Russian territory on basis of today's reports. Three main sectors are: (1) Leningrad area, in the southern part of which Russians reported repulsing a new German thrust; (2) Moscow front, where Russians reported hand-to-hand fighting in Kalinin, Moshaisk and Kaluga; (3) southern front, where Germans pushing toward Rostov were said to have engaged Russians near Taganrog

'Long Range Defense . . .'

By Wallace Carroll
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Kuibyshev, Oct. 24.—Russia is prepared to fight for years, and has detached two field marshals from the front to train large new armies of reserves who will some day sweep the Germans out of the country, S. A. Lozovsky, the official government spokesman, said today.

As Germans claimed continued progress in thrusts at Rostov and the Donets Basin, an informed London source last night implied that Britain would send her Middle East troops to support the Russian flank (black arrows) if the Nazis break through Rostov to threaten the Caucasian oil fields, between the Black and Caspian Seas, as well as India and the Suez (dotted arrows)

In his first press conference in this secondary Russian capital, 550 miles east of Moscow on the Volga, Lozovsky pointed out that the drive on Moscow had bogged down, that parts of the government moved to Kuibyshev, better to organize Russia's long-range defense, and that Moscow remained the capital of the Soviet Union, with Josef Stalin in charge there.

The recent shakeup in the military command, he said, was designed to permit Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, commander of the northern front, and Marshal Semyon Budenny, commander of the southern front, to train the new reserve armies back in the interior. Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, of the central front, took Budenny's command in the south. Voroshilov's successor was not designated. Gen. Grigori K. Zhukov, chief of the general staff, took command of the central front.

It is now possible to reveal that the diplomatic and press corps left Moscow October 16 when the Germans broke through the city's outer defenses in the direction of Mozhaisk, 60 miles to the west. Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov suggested the move but it was not compulsory.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, British Ambassador Sir Stafford Cripps and their staffs and others left by special train at 1 p. m. October 16. When they last drove to the Kremlin to see Molotov, men and women, their heads swathed in shawls against the cold, were marching through the streets en route to dig fortifications. Otherwise the city was normal.

The best available buildings in Kuibyshev were placed at the disposal of American, British and other missions. The green-fronted grand hotel, where newspapermen were housed, quickly became the focal point of the town's activities.

Divorced Mother Wonders How You Can Tell When Man Would Be a Good Stepfather? Her Former Husband Concealed Cruel Streak Before Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am much interested in a relative who was divorced, several years ago, from a man who had a cruel streak that did not show before marriage. She has since worked and supported herself and her daughter. They have a comfortable little home, are very congenial and have grand times together, as both are fond of sports.

Although the mother seems indifferent toward men and never makes any effort to attract them, nevertheless men do like her very much. I happen to know that she has had three worthwhile proposals of marriage in the past year. And I also know that, if she were to marry again, she would do everything in her power to make the marriage a success. But how can a woman tell if a man will make a good stepfather? What chance for happiness in marriage does my relative have?

R. C. E.

DEAR R. C. E.: It seems to me that a man's general attitude toward, and degree of understanding of, children's moods and manners, give the measure of his qualifications to be a "good stepfather." Adults who feel genuine good will toward children, who are sympathetically and helpfully disposed toward them, attract the confidence, respect and affection of youngsters of all ages as effortlessly as sugar attracts flies.

They don't go out of their way to demonstrate their possession of those qualities of personality or character which automatically put them en rapport with youth—because (1) they don't have to; and (2) they have too much respect for youth's instinct for verity to bait it with "humbug," in actions or words. On the contrary, they treat children of all ages (3-year-olds as well as teen-agers) with kindly matter-of-factness. Their manner implies that mutual good will exists and may be taken for granted; that it does not require ostentatious expression.

When it comes to choosing a "good stepfather" for her children, an indecisive mother might well be guided by their instinctive preferences,—supposing they are normally intelligent youngsters, free of neurotic disturbances, and have become acquainted with her admirers, on a "family friend" basis. By taking note of their unstudied reactions to the man she has in mind, and by giving serious attention to their reflective remarks about how he impresses them, she can pretty well know,—in advance of marriage,—just how well or ill he would get on with them.

Well-brought-up children, 10 or more years of age, children accustomed to a wholesome home environment and temperamentally "sound" adult associates, are uncannily shrewd in detecting "phoney" qualities in people, no matter how impeccable their surface-seeming may be. Thus, if your relative has a child of this type and age, she might talk things over with her—in the event she is weighing a proposal of marriage. She might say, in effect, "Lucy, do you think I ought to marry Mr. Blank? How would you like to have him for a father?"

Lucy's heart will answer even before her mind. She will answer involuntarily. If she says, "Oh, no, Mother! Don't marry HIM!"—mother had better abandon the idea. If she says, "Oh, Mother, I think he's just grand!"—he's undoubtedly a decent sort. And if she says, "Well, I don't know, mother. What do you think?"—it means that some delicate problems of adjustment would await the trio, in a domestic relationship. It means that Mr. Blank scores somewhere between 50 and 70,—in the potential 100 of Grade-A quality,—in Lucy's opinion.

As for your concluding question—your relative's "chances for happiness in marriage" are not necessarily impaired by the fact that she has a child to consider. But she must recognize her responsibility to take as careful account of her child's social and emotional needs as she does of her own—when and if she inclines seriously to marry again. In other words, if she wants to be happy in a second marriage, she must have the forethought to choose a man who has a marked aptitude for the parental role, and a genuine fondness for her child—and not simply a likable chap with whom she gets on beautifully when Lucy's off her hands.

Mrs. America At 50 Isn't So Good Looking

By Ida Jean Kain

A MISS America is selected annually and there are frequent if sporadic contests to elect a Mrs. America. But the Mrs. Average American of 45 to 55 has cheated herself out of the due recognition. At the very time when she has the most leisure and money to spend on herself, she does not measure up.

After watching from two to three thousand women pass along the Atlantic City boardwalk, it was borne in on me that 65 out of every 100 dress well and are well groomed. But, by the same law of averages, they also carry their heads forward at such a tilt that they produce a double chin. They are overweight through the waist, hips and thighs. And they are too thin through the legs.

The total effect is: They look five years older than their husbands—and it is to be presumed that their husbands have worked just as hard and have worried just as much.

They Seem Disgruntled

It is only fair to state that the unmarried women or those who were widows were overweight to a much greater degree than the housewives. And they did not give the impression of being out for a stroll. Too many of them were heading for the boardwalk bench or the hotel porch rocker. But of them all, I must say the most disgruntled looking were those who were being wheeled along in the roller chairs.

Since we are committed to making comparisons, we might as well go the whole way. The majority of the husbands were overweight, too. But not so much as their wives. And the bachelors looked even more spruce. On the whole, the men looked trim, walked jauntily, and seemed to be enjoying themselves.

This does not seem fair. The women were the ones who had spent the most money on personal upkeep. Their impeccable hair-do's, their beautiful clothes, told that story. And most of them had priceless furs slung around their shoulders, or draped about them in the current cape effect.

Start in the Thirties

Of course, the time to begin working on yourself is while you are still in your 30's. It is so easy then to take up a program that will keep you mentally alert, physically fit, during the 40's and 50's.

The first thing is to make up your mind that you will not let yourself get fat. Then, you must learn to appreciate, if not like, the foods that are low in calories and high in the protective elements.

And, finally, you must take up some activity that will keep you in shape. Walking is fine—provided you do enough of it regularly. Golf is better, because it gives you a certain amount of arm and waist exercise. But, best of all, have a set of calisthenics which will exercise all the figure controlling muscles, every day. If you follow these faithfully, you can have a figure and present an appearance that will do you proud.

Window Treatment Gives Charm to Room

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Household Editor.

Are you wrinkling your brow over how to lift your bedroom's face? If you are fortunate in having a group of windows, you can make them the starting point of your beauty treatment. The secret of good window treatment is to choose curtains that definitely complement the character of the room, its furnishings and your individual taste.

Here is a delightful bedroom in the new Dorchester House, 2480 Sixteenth Street Northwest, decorated by a local department store in a manner that dramatizes the bay window which reaches across one side of the room. This treatment also gives an effective background for the dressing table, as well as excellent light and splendid view.

The continuous valance of blue Celanese taffeta gives the effect of unity and preserves the architectural lines. The soft cream-colored, floor-length Ninon glass curtains will clean easily, do not stretch or sag, and the smooth weave repels dust and dirt. The blue and rose flowered Celanese taffeta drapes, edged with plain blue, fall gracefully at either end of the bay window.

Mrs. Mary E. Ott, assistant manager of the Dorchester House, surveys this room with great pleasure, for, she says, "It demonstrates how handsomely designed and finished furniture, together with curtains, drapes, bedspreads and other accessories, can make an harmonious and elegant interior."

The twin sleigh-back beds, with Sheraton detail, are of Honduras mahogany, fitted with quilted bedspreads and comforts of the same blue and rose material as the drapes, and lined with blue satin. Colonial blue is the prevailing color. The blue broadloom rug, the opalescent nailhead lamps with silver parchment shades, on the mahogany night tables, and pictures on blue mats with white frames, all add to the charming distinction of this eighteenth-century bedroom.

Make Magazine Racks for Xmas

SUCH A SMART magazine rack—but easily made, as so many furnishings can be, from odds and ends!

A cardboard carton for the base, about a yard of figured cotton cloth for covering, a colorful print for decoration—that's all you need for our rack, which you can happily use to brighten your living room or for a gift.

To shape the carton (which should be about 15 inches square and 6 inches deep) cut away all except 2 sides and bottom.

Then cut a piece of cotton to fit over the whole outside, allowing a 1-inch turn-in all around. Paste cloth to carton with wallpaper paste or flour paste, fastening edges down securely inside.

Your handle is a strip of tin, 16x1¾ inches, which you can buy at any tinsmith's. Bend tin 5 inches from either end and use a small strip of wood to reinforce top of handle. Tape wood and handle together with cloth, allowing cloth to extend 3 inches beyond ends.

Now fit handle and rack together, gluing cloth ends of handle firmly in place, and cover inside of rack with cloth—or would you prefer a bright-colored paper?

Your print might be a dainty Victorian lady or a hunting scene. Paste on—then give exterior of rack several coats of shellac, letting it dry between coats.

Your finished rack will look very smart and you'll feel very clever! But you can as easily make other furnishings; for instance—a plump little footstool, using tin cans!

Hats for Husbands

THE CONSENSUS among married and unmarried women being that men could use a little advice in the selection of their hats, we digress from feminine fashions to offer a few suggestions. A woman writes that her husband is of average height and wears mostly browns and blues. She asks what shape and color hat he should select for this season.

In answer the Fashion Editor quotes E. M. Timmerman, hat buyer of an exclusive men's shop. As for shape, Mr. Timmerman says that, although brims have been growing steadily wider during the last six years, they have now reached their greatest expansion. There are a few narrow brims, but they are the off-face or Homburg variety of English origin.

"Most of the domestic hats stick to wide brims, however," said Mr. Timmerman, "and the newest of all is the 'three-way shape.'" He explained that it can be worn turned down all the way around for sports, off-the-face in the conventional manner, or in the regular snap brim manner—generally called "open flange." This brim shows a flat set curl all the way around.

Although the "three-way" hat is the newest variety, Mr. Timmerman points out that over 75 per cent of hats have snap brims with the curl in back. Most of them have an open crown crushed forward in the pinched front, spread-in-rear manner. They are more popular than the center crease type, except of course, in Homburgs. But the Homburg and off-face hats are really only appropriate for wear during the overcoat season.

If you want your husband (or boy friend) to look like Errol Flynn, here he is in the most popular hat among men—the snap brim, crushed crown, semi-sport type

Since the popularity of neutral brown colors is extending to men's clothing, with the continuation of gabardines and covert colored tweeds, men's hats are being shown in medium tan or covert brown shades. There is also an increasing use of neutral brown hats with blue and blue-gray clothing, so that the brown hat is popular with both brown and blue suits. Rifle blue and West Point grey are also being shown to wear with blue and grey suits.

Havana Wardrobe

AMONG winter vacationists and convention celebrators, Havana, Cuba, is growing more and more popular. A woman who is flying via clipper from Miami to Havana the first of November, for a two-week vacation asks these questions: "What is the temperature there? Can I wear white shoes? What types of clothes in general are appropriate?"

Miss Ruth Bird, consultant of a local travel bureau, offers the following suggestions. "Wear darker colors, such as you would wear during late summer in Washington. Although lightweight suits and sports clothes are appropriate, they should be selected in fall colors if you would not be conspicuous. The natives love to wear black, and they say they can always tell tourists by their white shoes."

As Miss Bird explained, the weather in Havana is fairly warm until Christmas. The temperature there is similar to that of midday Washington at present. At night it seldom drops to below 70 degrees in Havana, however.

Dinner clothes are not needed, especially if one is going by boat from Baltimore to Miami and on to Havana. Even if the trip is made from New York, formal dress is not necessary—although there is a little more life on the boat. And certainly a dinner dress is not needed for an hour and a half clipper flight from Miami to Havana. While a simple long dress may be taken along, one seldom "dresses" in Havana.

Fifth British Sea Lord Attends Cocktail Party

By Carolyn Bell

The Fifth Sea Lord of Great Britain—and you'll have to admit it sounds imposing even in this title-strewn town—is in Washington. His full name is Rear Admiral Arthur Lumley St. George Lyster, C. V. O., D. S. O., now on duty with the British Admiralty. Yesterday afternoon he was among those attending a small cocktail party given by Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and Mrs. Towers at their home on Thirty-fifth Place.

The Admiral—who has had a meteoric career—saw service at Gallipoli, and was with the "grand fleet" until after the armistice was signed. In 1919 he was on duty aboard H. M. S. Renown during the Prince of Wales' tour to Canada and Australia. At one time he was A. D. C. to the King of England and according to the British Who's Who "likes shooting and fishing."

A few others who dropped in at the very informal party given by Admiral and Mrs. Towers were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, he is chairman of the Navy League dinner and has been working like fury on the plans; Lieut. and Mrs. Howard Cushing, Commander "Tommy" Thomas, Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Mrs. Charles Baker, Col. and Mrs. Horace B. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell.

Kenneth Watsons Fete Visitor

To shift abruptly from the British to the Irish, Lady Patricia Latham has certainly had a whirl since her arrival here from California. Lady Patricia, who is the daughter of the tenth Earl of Drogheda, Ireland, came here from England over a year ago with her 7-year-old son—a refugee from the blitz. Since then she has been dividing her time between Palm Beach, Calif., and New York, where she has a sister.

The house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, she was feted by them at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon, to which they invited a host of her friends—for she is well known here. Tomorrow night James Parks will give a supper party at the F Street Club in her honor. Tonight the former Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, will entertain at a dinner in her honor and Mrs. Martin Vogel and the Baron and Baroness Stackelberg will be hosts at cocktails on Monday afternoon.

Turkish Envoy, Wife Attend Party

Among the invited guests at yesterday's party were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, the Ambassador of Colombia, Gabriel Turbay; the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan, the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. DeGallais, the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels, accompanied by their daughter, Senorita Cristina Michels; the Second Secretary of the British Embassy and Lady Rumbold, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnstock, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wessel and Mr. and Mrs. George Strawbridge.

Still others invited were the First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. W. G. Hayter, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Gouthier, Angus and Victor Malcolm, James Parks, Mrs. Natalie Keeney Phillips, John Foster, of the British Embassy; Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr., Mr. and Mme. Camille Chautemps, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Mrs. Phillip Bonsall, Senator Arthur Capper, Lieut. Peter Smithers of the British Embassy and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Mrs. Glass Entertains At Luncheon

Mrs. Carter Glass, wife of the Virginia Senator, entertained at luncheon in the Pan American room of the Mayflower yesterday in honor of Mrs. Walter Wyatt. The long table was decorated with bowls of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums and scattered autumn leaves.

The guests included Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, Mrs. Alva B. Adams, Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. Charles A. Joubert, Mrs. Harry Hawes, Mrs. Rixey Smith, Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. J. H. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson Christian, Mrs. Harry Blair.

Also Mrs. Walter Bloedern, Mrs. John Price, Mrs. William Disque, Mrs. John McKee, Mrs. Charles Crawford, Miss Emma Greer, Miss Margaret Willis, Mrs. Seiford Stellwagen, Mrs. Golden Bell, Miss Betty Hynes, Mrs. Ben B. Dulaney, Mrs. Marcellus Woodard and Mrs. Francis C. Brown.

Suzanne Kappler Gives Informal Beer Party

Entertaining at an informal beer party Miss Suzanne Kappler was hostess last evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kappler, on Klingle Road.

Guests included Lieut. and Mrs. Lowell Bradford, Miss Betty Burton, Miss Eula Council, Miss Achsah Dorsey, Miss Mary Senate Howes, Miss Gloria Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. James Wimsatt, William Stott, Earl Singleton, Sidney Smith, Jack Hayes, Gordon Moodie, Nelson Moneys, G. B. Seibold, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maguire, Miss Eleanor Mattingly, the Misses Jane and Laura Belle Wyatt, the Misses Phyllis and Randy Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hays, Polly Palmer, Miss Caroline Wadden, Miss Shirley Wilson and several dozen others.

Mrs. Beatty Fetes Wife of Navy Chief

Mrs. Frank Knox, wife of the Navy Secretary, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Frank E. Beatty entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club.

Latimers to Live In Macon, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip A. Latimer, jr., who were married at the Sixth Presbyterian Church October 18, will make their home in Macon, Ga., following their wedding trip through New England and Canada. The bride is the former Miss Miriam Price, of Montgomery, Ala.

The Rev. Herbert Garner officiated in a setting of chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. A long train of ivory satin and full-length veil were features of the bride's gown, and her bouquet was white roses and lily-of-the-valley. Maid of honor was Miss Betty McClure and attendants were Miss Jane Zink, Miss Shirley Zink and Miss Lorraine Doffenmeyer. The gowns of Miss McClure and the attendants were of varied shades of moire, cut with basque waist and full skirts. Miss Margaret Ann Doffenmeyer, the flower girl, wore pale yellow moire.

Best man was Mitchell Latimer, brother of the bridegroom, and ushers were Allen Latimer, another brother; Fred Peterson and Paul Cogswell.

Jacobses Plan To Make Home In New Alexandria

When they return from their wedding trip to Florida after November 6, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Delaney Jacobs will make their home in New Alexandria. Before her marriage October 22, Mrs. Jacobs was Miss Margaret Emma Wilsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Frank Wilsey, of New Alexandria. The Rev. Ernest A. de Bordenave performed the 4 o'clock ceremony at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She chose black hat and accessories to wear with her fawn blue dress which featured a matching jacket. Her flowers were gardenias and she carried a white prayer book. Her sister, Miss Jeanne Elizabeth Wilsey, was maid of honor. Best man for Mr. Jacobs was Paul D. Caton, and ushers were William Jacobs and Roland Tap.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Davis Return From Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Clemens Davis returned late yesterday from their ten-day wedding trip down the East coast and to Miami and are making their home at 222 North Oakland Avenue, Arlington. Before her marriage October 14 at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Davis was Miss Mary Elizabeth Gore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin D. Gore, of Remington, Va.

The Rev. Peter Marshall officiated in a setting of chrysanthemums and palms as the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, R. Bruce Gore, of Washington. Her satin bridal gown featured long sleeves which ended in points over her hands and a sweetheart neckline, and her veil was caught by a pearl tiarra. Roses made her bridal bouquet.

Miss Ruth Helmick, the maid of honor, wore periwinkle blue taffeta cut on princess lines with matching blue veil. She carried yellow roses matching those which held her veil. The other attendants were Miss Catherine Campbell, Mrs. Watson Owens, Mrs. Eugene Johnson and Miss Adelaide Keller.

Robert Davis served his brother as best man, and ushers were Eugene Gore, brother of the bride, George Derr, Lee Huntzberger and Dale Champlin.

Chrysanthemums and roses decorated the home of the bride's parents for the reception. Miss Janet H. Gore took charge of arrangements assisted by Mrs. Selma Mott.

Mrs. Davis was graduated from Wilson Teachers College in 1938. Mr. Davis, who is the son of Mrs. Bertha Davis, of Arlington, is now assistant construction superintendent in the Bureau of Engraving having taken his degree in engineering in 1936 at George Washington University. He received his LL. B. in law in 1938 and was admitted to the District bar that year.

Lucy Ohler, Lieut. Murphy Are Married

The marriage of Miss Lucy Mae Ohler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Ohler of Philadelphia and Washington, and Lieut. James Leonidas Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Murphy of Andalusa, Ala., took place yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond G. Church in Washington. The Rev. Worth M. Tippy officiated at the 10 a. m. ceremony.

The bride's father gave her in marriage. Her gown of heavy ivory satin was cut with fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and full skirt. Her ivory tulle veil was held by coronet of heirloom rose point lace, and she carried a prayerbook and white orchids. Powder blue silk jersey gowned Miss Phoebe Virginia Vitt of New York, aunt of the bride, who acted as maid of honor. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

Lieut. William C. Pless of Gadsden, Ala., was best man for Lieut. Murphy.

Assisting at the reception after the ceremony were Miss Hope and Miss Ruth Ohler, sisters of the bride. Mrs. Ohler, the bride's mother, wore a black costume suit and hat with a corsage of orchids.

After their wedding trip to New Haven and Canada the couple will live in Anacostia, D. C. For travelling, Mrs. Murphy chose a black velveteen suite and black coat. Her hat was trimmed with black velveteen, and she wore a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Murphy attended George Washington University where she belonged to Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Mr. Murphy was graduated from Alabama Polytechnic Institute and Yale University and is a member of Phi Kappa Phi and Scarab national honorary fraternities.

Guests from out-of-town at the wedding were Mrs. William C. Pless of Gadsden, Ala., Miss Ruth Ohler of Philadelphia and Miss Marguerite Rinker of Miami, Fla.

Miss K. T. Stevens Is Honor Guest at Luncheon Party

Attractive Miss K. T. Stevens, actress appearing in the current Kaufman-Ferber play, was the guest in whose honor Miss Meredith Howard entertained at luncheon yesterday at Hotel 2400. Miss Howard and Miss Stevens met each other in Hollywood some time ago.

Looking like a fashion picture, Miss Stevens wore a black crepe frock, with a tiered skirt, long sleeves and a high neckline. Her wide-brimmed black hat was perched becomingly on the back of her blond hair, and her black veil was neatly tied beneath her chin. The item of her attire that attracted special attention, however, was her tricky lapel gadget that looked like a miniature old-style street-light.

"It's a blackout lamp, filled with phosphorus," said Miss Stevens. "It shines in the dark."

Miss Howard, receiving informally in her apartment, wore a black frock, accented with a pale blue yoke beaded in white. Her guests included Mrs. Joseph Casey, Mrs. Frank Newman, who recently came here from Chicago, the Misses Frances and Cheshire Cox, Mrs. Murray Borden, Mrs. Harry Butcher, Mrs. Ned Morris, Mrs. Edmund W. Starling, Mrs. Anne Wheaton, Mrs. Igor Cassini, Mrs. Ulin Krebs, Mrs. Edith Randop, Mrs. Ned Talmadge, Miss Henrietta Sherwood and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

Miss Devereux To Be Married

Col. and Mrs. Frederick L. Devereux, of Bronxville, N. Y., have announced the engagement of Col. Devereux's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Clark Devereux, to Lawrence Brundige Abrams, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Brundige Abrams, of Glen Ridge, N. J.

Miss Devereux attended Wellesley College. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis N. Devereux, of Washington. Her maternal grandparents were the late Col. and Mrs. Edward B. Clark, also of Washington.

On the paternal side Miss Devereux is descended from John Devereux, who settled in Marblehead, Mass., in 1636, and who was the youngest son of the fifth viscount of Hereford. On the maternal side Miss Devereux is descended from Daniel Clark, who came to this country from Kenilworth, England, in 1639.

Col. Devereux, a retired executive of the Bell System, is mayor of Bronxville and chairman of the Westchester County defense council.

Mrs. Abrams was graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and Yale University, where he was a member of Saint Anthony Hall and Delta Psi. He is a member of the Yale Club and is associated with Ingersoll-Rand Co.

Don Hammerlund Weds Ida Eveler In Georgetown

Mr. and Mrs. Don Hammerlund, whose wedding took place Wednesday night at Georgetown Lutheran Church, will make their home at 5220 North Capitol Street. Mrs. Hammerlund, who is the former Miss Ida Eveler, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Eveler, was given in marriage by her father. Mr. Hammerlund is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, of Washington.

The Rev. Harold E. Beatty officiated for the 7 o'clock ceremony, and organ music was played by Sherman J. Kreusberg in the candle-lit church, which was decorated with white chrysanthemums and gladioli. The bride wore a green wool costume suit, with hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. Paul Lynch, her sister, as maid of honor, wore a gold wool dress and had and carried rust chrysanthemums.

Lieut. Robert O. Hammerlund was best man. A reception was held at the church after the ceremony. Among the guests from out of town were Mrs. Francis MacGrath, sister of the bride, from Philadelphia, and Mrs. Fannie Still, of Kankakee, Ill., an aunt of the bridegroom. The bride was graduated from McKinley High School and Mr. Hammerlund attended the University of Maryland and Georgetown University school of law.

Defense Need For Metal Hits Girl Scouts

Girl Scouts of the Nation will give up the 10 tons of copper used annually to make their pins, because the metal is vital to national defense industry, Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, of Washington, national vice president of Scouts, said yesterday after her return from the organization's convention in Dallas, Tex.

"Silk for the merit badges, which the girls earn by hard work and wear on the sleeves of their uniforms, is no longer available," she said, pointing out the need of that material for parachutes.

The Girl Scout organization is voluntarily giving up these and other vital materials used in their equipment, and is seeking substitutes, she said.

"Aluminum, which is needed for airplanes, can no longer be used for our canteens. We have located an enamelware pot for our mess kits, which have been made of aluminum, and we are looking for a substitute frying pan and cup."

Delegates to the convention saw the new cap of dark green gabardine which the Scout civilian defense corps will wear. This group will take intensive training in such courses as child care, food and nutrition, transportation and communication, shelter, clothing and recreation.

Latin America Lecture Topic

A series of current events lectures about Latin America for Washington club women will be given this season by Dr. Edwin Ryan, professor of South American history at Catholic University, starting November 10, it was announced yesterday.

He will speak at the Hotel Washington at 8:30 p. m. on the second Monday of each month, on the theme "Latin America Last Month," recounting the chief events there in the preceding weeks.

Sponsors for the series include Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Charles A. Thomson, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes.

Representatives of clubs studying Latin American affairs held a meeting this week at the home of Mrs. Helen Montfort Moodie, 2401 Calvert Street, to hear Dr. Ryan discuss plans for the series. Those attending were:

Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell and Mrs. Bertha Chaney, District branch, National League of American Pen Women; Mrs. Harvey Wiley, Housekeepers' Alliance; Mrs. Edward C. Shields and Mrs. Tilman B. More Canadian Wives Must Take Defense Jobs

By Lucia Giddens

An increasing number of married women in Canada will have to take jobs in war industries to meet production demands, Paul Reading, attache at the Canadian Legation, told the Capital Division, Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, yesterday.

At a minimum, one married woman in every ten will have to take a job or else all boys and girls over 16 will have to go to work, he said. As a maximum, one married woman in every four must go into industry, or two-thirds of Canada's total "hidden reserve of labor" will have to come into action. This reserve, he pointed out, includes retired workers and persons who have never worked before.

Th number of persons now engaged in Canadian war industries is about 60 per cent of the total which will be ultimately required, Mr. Reading said. The remaining 40 per cent, he said, must come from women, from young people who are growing up to working age and from workers who are shifted by further curtailment of peace-time industry.

Speaking at the association's luncheon at Tilden Gardens Apartments, Mr. Reading described the way in which women have already stepped into Canadian industry.

One Plant Needs 4000 Women

In a plant which will presently be "the largest automatic arms plant in the world," he said, five girls were being tried out in 1939. Recently the number of women employed had risen to more than 1000, and before the end of the year there will be more than 4000. They are doing all sorts of tasks there, except those which call for unusual physical strength.

In one steel plant, which formerly employed only men, 90 per cent of the workers now are girls, he said.

In aircraft plants, women are doing riveting and welding. They are making bomb sights and range finders, are filling shells. They form the largest proportion of employes in some of the chemical and explosive plants, he added.

He read the following from a semiofficial report on Canada's war industries: "Women have proved to be highly adaptable in manufacturing processes in which fingers are more important than hands, where strength is not a principal requirement. The nimbleness of feminine fingers is invaluable in the making of intricate radio and electrical devices, shell fuses and other delicate mechanisms.

Women's Patience Greater Than Men's

"Women, too, possess greater patience than men in more monotonous work," it was stated.

When the "machines at which women are working go haywire, they do not tinker with them for hours, but promptly set up a cry for proper help . . . They don't spend time wondering what the machine next to them is doing . . ."

After reading several such quotations from the report, Mr. Reading remarked that it could be written only by a woman.

Mrs. Claude B. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Lady Archer-Shee, of High land Falls, N. Y., were among the guests.

At the business session, plans were discussed for the division's sale of handcraft work by rural women December 1, 2 and 3 in the parish house at St. Margaret's Church.

Charity Dance Planned At Community Center

The Washington Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children at Denver will meet at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Jewish Community Center to discuss the charity dance to be given in November.

Zonta to Hear Banker

"Inflation" will be discussed by John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank of Washington, at the Zonta Club luncheon at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Y. W. C. A.

2286 Become New Members Of the D. A. R.

A much larger group than usual—2286 new members—were admitted to the Daughters of the American Revolution by the national board of management at its meeting yesterday at Continental Hall.

Officials credited the increased interest in membership to the fact that the D. A. R. traditional activities for defense and citizenship are becoming more widely recognized.

Flowers which usually appear in profusion at gatherings of the D. A. R. were noticeably scarcer at the reception which the District D. A. R. gave last night for the national officers at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. George Clarke Ober, jr., State chairman of entertainment, who was in charge of arrangements for the reception, said that her committee would customarily have sent corsages to women in the receiving line. Last night this mass outlay for flowers was omitted, in line with national officers' requests that festivities be simpler in these times when other needs are great.

Individual gifts of flowers, to be worn at the party, were of course in evidence. And the refreshment table was centered with bouquets of white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York City, president general, and other national officers and Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, State regent, and other State officials were in the receiving line which formed in the Chinese room. Only palms and flags were used in decoration there.

Musicians from the Navy Band played during the evening.

Miss Chenoweth Will Officiate At Navy Day Rite

Miss Chenoweth, Miss Justine Roseman and Dr. and Mrs. Clifton P. Clark made a recent motor trip to Berkeley Springs.

Mrs. C. Archibald Montgomery has issued invitations to a tea in honor of Miss Chenoweth next Saturday afternoon at 3302 N Street, Georgetown.

Lambda Chi Sorority Dinner-Dance Tonight

Alpha Province of Lambda Chi Sorority is celebrating its fifteenth birthday with a banquet and dance at Hotel Raleigh tonight at 8 o'clock. Catherine Hewlitt is to be toastmistress and Ethel Holtsclaw, former national president, is to be guest speaker.

Elizabeth Midgett, chairman of the province, and Josephine Mesick, vice chairman, have made arrangements for the affair. The sorority's ten chapters in Washington will be represented.

Rich Will Speak On 'Our Country'

Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, will speak on "Our Country," at the opening fall meeting of the Wheel of Progress at 8 p. m. Monday at the Washington Hotel.

Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president, has appointed Mrs. Paul Anderson musical director, and Mrs. Alice Roberts Koch publicity director.

A.A.U.W. Hears Bolles

Progress of defense activities in the District was discussed by Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director for the coordinator of civilian defense in the metropolitan area, at the dinner of the local group of the American Association of University Women last night at its clubhouse. He described the establishment of the air raid warden service.

Women's Press Club

Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Air Corps, will be honor guest and will speak off the record at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at 1 p. m. Tuesday at the Willard Hotel.

Women Voters Ask Repeal of Neutrality Act

Repeal of the Neutrality Act was urged on Congress yesterday by the National League of Women Voters.

In a statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Miss Marguerite M. Wells, league president, called for "forthright" repeal with the exception of section 12, establishing the National Munitions Control Board.

The act should now be repealed, she said, "to free the hands of the Congress and the Executive, restore to them their constitutional responsibilities, remove the inhibition of legislative restrictions, so that policies may be developed that will best protect the United States."

The statement declared further that public opinion has at last recognized the futility of attempting to legislate peace and the danger of tying the hands of our Government in advance of circumstances so that it is unable to exercise its constitutional functions as circumstances demand.

"The League of Women Voters never approved the policy of the Neutrality Act. We have advocated a foreign policy for the United States that would discriminate among belligerents; penalize aggressor nations, give assistance to the victims of aggression. During 17 years league members have affirmed and reaffirmed their conviction that the United States cannot be secure in a world subject to periodic outbursts of armed conflicts. During the past five years each convention has specifically reaffirmed and restated its support of discrimination against aggressor nations."

Fashion Show To Feature Ilka Chase

Ilka Chase, actress, will come down from New York to act as commentator for the fashion show which the Woman's Army and Navy League will present at post headquarters at Fort Myer November 4 at 3 p. m.

Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the chief of staff, will welcome the fashion show guests at her home at tea. In the receiving line with her will be Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War; Mrs. Frank Knox, wife of the Secretary of Navy; Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of the chief of naval operations.

To Obtain Funds For Service Club

The league is sponsoring the show to provide funds for the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club at 1015 L Street Northwest, whic it owns and operates.

Honorary chairmen for the event, headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, include Mrs. Stimson, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, Mrs. John J. McCloy, Mrs. Ralph Bard, Mrs. Artemus L. Gates, Mrs. Stark, Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb.

Chairmen for the show, Mrs. Leonard Townsend Gerow, wife of Brig. Gen. Gerow, chief of the war plans division, is assisted by Mrs. McCook Knox as civilian chairman. Tickets, which are on sale at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, will be available later at numerous hotels.

Committee Chooses Models for Show

The committee on models, which is headed by Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, has chosen a group of service-connected girls and women to be models. They include Miss Alice Barry, Miss Natalie Sutherland, Miss Jane Badger, Miss Theodora Chandler, Miss Helen Graham, Miss Betty Bliss, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, Mrs. Robert E. Hoyt, Mrs. Peter Belin and Mrs. Robert A. Long Elms.

House to Pass Loan Bill, McGehee Says

Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi, chairman of the District Subcommittee in charge of the small loan bill, yesterday predicted that the measure will pass the House when brought up for action on the floor.

The bill would allow local small loan companies to operate here if interest rates on the unpaid balances of loans were not over 2 per cent a month and the loans did not exceed $500.

Representative McGehee discounted reports that a powerful lobby, representing small loan interests in other States where the rate is more than 2 per cent, would seek to squelch the District bill.

"The lobby, if there is one, certainly is not as active as the one against a similar bill four or five years ago," he said. "I certainly don't think it can affect passage of this bill."

The proposed legislation, introduced by Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was reported out of the District Committee last June 5 and has since remained inactive. It would require small loan companies to have a minimum cash capital of $25,000, to post a bond of $5,000 and pay an annual license fee of $250.

It is believed that no floor action has been taken on the measure thus far because it is of a controversial nature and would take time for consideration when the House is pressed with matters of national importance.

James Roosevelt Fails to Attend German Classes

Capt. James Roosevelt, United States Marine Corps, would like to learn to speak German, but he seems to be a lackadaisical scholar, to say the least.

The President's eldest son, now on active duty as liaison officer under Defense Information Coordinator William B. Donovan, enrolled in a beginners' German class at George Washington University more than two weeks ago.

And what happens? He looks in on the class once, then fails to show up again.

"Oh, he's been too busy," his secretary explained yesterday. He still plans to take the course." She said Capt. Roosevelt enrolled in the class for personal reasons, but his action caused speculation on the possibility that it had something to do with shortwave broadcasts to Germany.

Whatever the purpose, Capt. Roosevelt had better get started if he expects to learn any German. The class has been meeting three times a week for five weeks.

Plumbers Union Secretary Dies At Seattle Parley

Thomas E. Burke, 77, secretary-treasurer of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada, died Thursday night in Seattle, Wash., it was learned here yesterday.

Mr. Burke, who lived in the Woodley Park Apartments, had gone to Seattle for the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor early this month. During one of the sessions he was stricken with a heart attack. He had been a patient in the Seattle Providence Hospital since.

Mrs. Burke, who was at her husband's bedside, will arrive in Washington with the body next Tuesday morning. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

20-Foot Yacht Swept by Fire; Damage $20,000

Fire swept the interior of a 60-foot yacht docked at Ninth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest last night, causing damage estimated at $20,000.

Private F. S. May, of Truck Company No. 10, fell overboard while fighting the fire and suffered head injuries. May was placed in the fire chief's car and en route to Emergency Hospital it collided with an automobile at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest. Jack R. Smith, 31, of Mount Airy, N. C., driver of the other car, was charged with failing to give right of way. Little damage was caused by the crash and no one was hurt.

The yacht, Leatherwood, is owned by Capt. Frank Flynn, who lived on the ship but was not on board at the time. Origin of the fire was not immediately determined.

Grand Jury to Get Auto Assault Case

Charged with assault with a dangerous weapon—his automobile—and drunken driving, Earl Nero, 36, of 1812½ Eleventh Street Northwest, was at liberty under $1500 bail last night after an arraignment in Police Court. He was ordered held for the grand jury on the assault count by Judge Walter J. Casey. The other case was continued one week.

Motorcycle Policeman Herbert Wright arrested the motorist after a chase through Southeast Thursday night after the policeman fired several shots, one of which struck the man in the arm. Wright said Nero attempted to knock him off his motorcycle during the chase.

They 'Ain't Hell-Raising Gents' So $3,706,652 Means No Party

By the United Press

Kansas City, Kans., Oct. 24.—Willie and Floyd Mayweather, Negro packing house workers, said tonight that they "just naturally ain't hell-raising gents" and didn't intend to change their ways just because a judge in Oklahoma awarded them $1,853,326 each today.

The two brothers, who received the money for oil lands as heirs of their aunt, a Creek Indian, sat in Willie's home, accepting the congratulations of friends who dropped in, most of them "sort of expecting a party."

"Ain't going to be no party," said 29-year-old Willie.

"Furthermo, we ain't buying anything," he said, to which Floyd, 27, added a solemn "Amen."

"No diamonds," said Willie.

"Amen," answered Floyd.

"No big cahs."

"Amen."

"No loud clothes, no gold watches, no high-class dames," said Willie.

"Amen," said Floyd, and glanced at Willie's wife. "Amen," he said much louder.

Judge C. O. Beaver at Sapulpa, Okla., today awarded $7,413,286 in property damages and income in escrow to the two Negro men and Mrs. Izora Alexander Lee, an 80-year-old Claremore, Okla., woman.

The verdict directed that half of the money go to the Mayweathers and the other half to Mrs. Lee and several of her relatives.

Defendants in the suit were the Sinclair Oil and Refining Co. and 24 others who drilled 15 producing wells and erected a gasoline refinery on the Indian head right of the Mayweather's late aunt, Lete Alexander, a Creek Indian.

Attorneys said the heirs would share the actual ownership of the 15 oil wells, increasing their joint fortune to about 15 million dollars.

Services Held In Memory of Judge Aukam

District Court officials and members of the D. C. Bar Association joined yesterday in paying tribute to Judge George C. Aukam, presiding justice of the Municipal Court who died on Thursday at Doctors Hospital.

In a memorial service held in the courtroom of Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, H. Winship Wheatley, former president of the local Bar Association, termed the late judge "the ftaher of the Municipal Court" and refrred to his reputation for conducting "a poor man's court."

Addressing a gathering of more than a hundred jurists, lawyers and court officers, Wheatley declared that when Judge Aukam "came to the bench we had nothing but a justice of the peace system."

"He framed, and by his efforts there was passed, the original Municipal Court Act which created the court," he added.

Chief Justice Wheat made a formal response to the eulogy, which was entered in the court records of the 69-year-old jurist's death upon request of the Bar Association.

A group of 12 men were named to represent the organization at the funeral, scheduled for 2 p. m. today at St. John's Episcopal Church with interment at Oak Hill Cemetery. They are: John J. Carmody, J. Spalding Flannery, George E. Hamilton, jr., Francis W. Hill, jr., Richmond B. Keech, Paul E. Lesh, Godfrey Munter, Elwood H. Seal, George E. Sullivan, H. Winship Wheatley, Roger J. Whiteford and Harlan Wood.

Before the services, the body of Judge Aukam will be at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin Street Northwest.

$12,000 in Gems Missing at Store

Thirteen diamond rings valued at $12,000 were missing yesterday from the Galt jewelry store, 607 Thirteenth Street Northwest, ten minutes after two suave, soft-spoken men had entered the store to look at a tea set.

Charles A. Marggroff, a clerk, told police he waited on the men, down both of whom were immaculately dressed. As he showed a tea set to one of them, the second man walked over to a case containing the diamond rings. The men made no purchase but politely thanked Marggroff for his patience.

After the men had gone, the diamond rings were missing from a tray.

Dr. F. W. Buck, Retired D. C. Physician, Dies

Funeral services for Dr. Fred W. Buck, 68, retired Washington physician and businessman, who died yesterday at his home, 201 Second Street Northeast, will be held at 4:30 p. m. today at Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N Street Northeast, with Elks' rites.

DR. BUCK

Burial will be at Flagler, Colo., with Masonic rites.

Dr. Buck, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., studied for his profession at Olivet College and Central Medical College, St. Joseph, Mo., returning to Grand Rapids to practice. At the outbreak of the World War he entered aviation.

Following the war, he was for 11 years executive secretary of the Federal Dispensary Tax Reduction League and frequently appeared before Congressional committees on behalf of repeal. He became president of the Pyramid Card Co. and originated the five-suit, 52-card contract bridge game. On September 3, 1933, Dr. Buck joined the staff of the investment firm of Slauson, White & Rowe, Inc., here. He resided in Washington for 12 years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Buck; a son, Lawrence F. Buck, of San Francisco; a daughter, Mrs. Willard Andrews, of Sacramento, Calif., three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Hyattsville Bank Bandits Reported Heading North

Washington police last night were ordered to be on the lookout for an automobile with three men and two women wanted for holdup and robbery of a bank of $52,000. The car was last seen speeding north from Charlotte, N. C.

Police said the men and women were sought in connection with the daring holdup of two messengers of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. in Hyattsville, Md., last September 25.

Advices from Charlotte said the men and two women had fled from a hotel there just as authorities were about to take them into custody.

The bank messengers were held up by three armed bandits and were forced to turn over $52,000 in cash and $75,000 in checks.

Gipsy Smith Warns Youth To Find Grace

Mere "sentiment, sanctimonious, lacadaisical religious desire" won't make any man a Christian, Gipsy Smith, 81, international evangelist, told a capacity audience at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, last night.

In a talk that was directed primarily to youth under 20, Gipsy warned them that "they still lack something," if they don't know what grace means.

Reason He's Here

He explained that he came to Washington to make his current series of lectures because he did not want any youngster to ask him on Judgment Day, "Why did you let me down?"

"It is in that spirit that I come to you tonight, as though I was before a judge and jury pleading for your life," he told the group.

"Put first things first, and then you will have no trouble," he said. "You cannot get religion just by joining young people's religious clubs and churches. The clubs are all right in their place, but it takes more than that."

Shortcomings Recognized

As a sure way of recognizing one's own religious shortcomings, the Gipsy suggested that the group look around at genuinely religious people and see if they could be asked, "What have you got that I haven't got?" Poise and dignity are sure signs that a person is following a religious way of life, he said.

"Young people can appreciate Christ," he declared. "I can stand here for hours and tell you of all the important international figures that I brought religion at an early age.

"It doesn't spoil a boy or girl to be a Christian. Goodness is not weakness. It takes strength and dignity to be good."

Two D. C. Men Get Field Jobs for USO

Two Washingtonians have been sent by the Catholic Community Service along with 30 others into the field to work with the United Service Organization, it was announced yesterday.

They are Vincent Carberry, 5800 Fourteenth Street Northwest, who will go to Macon, Ga., and Lee Thomas Muth, 3742 Twelfth Street Northeast, who was assigned to Battle Creek, Mich. They and the 28 others will operate U. S. O. clubs for service men. All were given intensive training by the headquarters staff of the Catholic Community Service.

D. C. Defense Plans Still All on Paper

Elaborate Proposals Have Been Set Up, But Government Provides No Funds

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Elaborate proposals have been made for defense of the Nation's Capital against armed attack—but the entire program has never passed the "paper planning" stage.

Those in charge of the city's emergency protection setup know—and have announced—what they want and need. But requested funds for carrying on the work have been denied repeatedly.

There have been admissions from the Commissioners and Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of the District Defense Council, that Washington—with its millions of dollars in Federal property—is many months behind other communities in defense preparations.

Three times the Federal Budget Bureau has turned down requested financial assistance, suggesting alternatives which would force District taxpayers to foot the whole bill.

$1,466,172 Asked

It has been pointed out on numerous occasions that the bulk of property to be protected here belongs to the Federal Government and the Government should pay the costs.

To carry on a variety of activities, the Commissioners requested approval of some $1,466,172—of which $32,280 was for administrative expenses. The Budget Bureau has steadfastly refused the money, suggesting, at one time, the funds be secured through "usual channels"—which would mean payment by the taxpayers.

Col. Bolles, who took office September 7 after the defense director's job was taken from Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst because of his multiple other duties, has since operated with borrowed help and equipment.

Col. Bolles has been paying taxi fares, telegraph rates and other expenses connected with his job out of his own pocket. He has been assured of reimbursement when and if funds are provided.

His office equipment in the District Building has been loaned from other departments—typewriters, furniture and paper. Stamps for mailing necessary communications also have been borrowed.

There hasn't a day passed when some city around the country doesn't write for information on the Capital's "model" defense program.

When this happens, the Commissioners refer the request to the Federal Office of Civilian Defense, concealing as best they can that Washington has yet to place a workable plan in operation.

On the other hand the city has a small army of volunteer workers. Hundreds of men and women have volunteered their services; some have been put to work in clerical jobs.

First Concrete Step

Tonight's scheduled mass meetings throughout the city to establish civilian air-raid warning systems for the various communities is the first concrete step yet undertaken to launch an organized defense movement. Progress in this phase of community defense has been moving along for nearly a year in other jurisdictions.

The money asked for by the Commissioners—in addition to administrative expenses in Col. Bolles' office—would go for emergency water slupply and fire department equipment, fire alarm communications, emergency fire fighting equipment and apparatus, additional fire department personnel, air-raid precaution equipment, training auxiliary personnel, emergency radios for fire department and improvement to the city's entire water distribution system.

G. W. and Georgetown Universities Dine and Dance

Rent-Control Report Asks Swift Passage

Rep. Randolph Will Submit It Monday for Action On First D. C. Day

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday completed a report on the District rent-control bill which urges "immediate passage" of the measure. It will be presented to the House Monday.

The bill, freezing rents at the January 1 level, "embodies the best features of all recommendations submitted to the committee thus far," the report states, being the result of "active and interested cooperation" by tthe Office of Production Management, the Washington Housing Association, the Washington Industrial Union Council and the Washington Real Estate Board.

The bill is scheduled for House action at the next District Day, November 3. Under its terms a bona fide resident of the District or nearby Virginia or Maryland for the last three years would be appointed to the post of administrator by the Commissioners at an annual salary of $7500. His powers extend until December 31, 1945.

Worst Than Last War

The report says in part:

"With a population influx at a higher rate than ever before in its history, the Nation's Capital today is faced with a demand for housing conditions which threatens to create a situation more serious than that existing during the last war.

"The present demand for living quarters on the part of those whom the defense effort requires to live and work in Washington has tempted some unscrupulous owners and managers of rental properties to demand exorbitant and profiteering rentals.

"It is true, and gratifying to note, that a large majority of owners and managers have refrained from taking advantage of the rental situation created by the national emergency as it affects the Nation's Capital. This bill is designed to protect this group as well as present and future tenants in the District from the rent gouging practices of a minority of landlords."

Rental statistics considered by the committee revealed that the vacancy ratio here has been "seriously below normal, particularly since January, 1941," the report says, adding that according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics survey of the District "most of the rent increases of the past two years have occurred since January 1, 1941."

The report further states:

"Proposals in this bill are forward-looking. Not only are they designed to meet the acute present problem, but they will at the same time prevent the present problem becoming worse—a situation which would demand more drastic remedial action.

"It is particularly appropriate that the Congress immediately enact legislation that may serve as a model for enactments by States which may desire control for those areas within their borders suffering from similar rental housing dislocations caused by the national emergency and the defense program."

Dances, Tours, Shows Set for Service Men

Service men in Washington on weekend leave will be provided with a sparkling program of dances, dinners, shows and tours. Dancing lessons and instruction in Spanish are also being offered.

Beginning tonight, the regular Saturday night "block dance" will be held in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest, at 8 to 11 p. m. under auspices of the Women's Battalion of the Government Employes Services Committee, instead of on E Street west of Post Square.

Today's schedule of recreation will include a sightseeing tour of Washington starting at 2:15 from the Supreme Court Building, a campfire and picnic supper in Rock Creek Park, sponsored by the Y. W. C. A., to begin at 4, from the "Y" at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest; a dinner at St. John's Episcopal Church Service Club, followed by games and dancing, a dinner at Foundry Methodist Church, 6:30, and a dance at the Jewish Community Center at 8. The Blackfriars Guild is staging "Ladies in Retirement" at St. Paul's Auditorium, with the curtain going up at 8:15. A dance at the Loyal Order of the Moose Hall, 1414 I Street Northwest starts at 9, a dinner and dance, Fellowship House, 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, at 6, and the various service clubs are having an "open house" over the weekend.

Four hundred hostesses are expected to dance at the National Catholic Community Service Club's "open house" and dance starting tonight at 8. Jack Rollins, local dancing master, will conduct dancing classes in the afternoon from 3 until 5.

The AI Motors Co. will conduct their weekly entertainment and dance tonight at the Soldiers Recreation Center, Arlington, Va., Tenth and Irving Streets North. The dance will be formal. Spanish classes are being arranged.

A public works grant will be used to convert the Gunton Building, Ninth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, into a recreation center for service men. The center is expected to be ready for use within a month.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation is sponsoring a variety show tomorrow afternoon at 2. A tea dance will be held at the National Catholic Service Men's Club at 3 tomorrow afternoon. The B. Y. P. U. of the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, invites service men to attend a young people's meeting at 6:30 p. m. A light supper will be served at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, between 6 and 7 p. m. Swimming can be enjoyed at the Y. M. C. A. from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m.

Churches of all denominations will welcome service men.

Activities for colored service men will embrace free dances at Banneker Fieldhouse from 8 until 11 p. m. The Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., 901 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, will hold a dance and roller skating from 8 until 11 p. m. Facilities for recreation also will be available at the Army Recreation Camp in Anacostia, D. C.

1800 Dwellings To Be Built Soon In Alexandria

A residential community of 1800 three to six-room modified Colonial-style dwellings at Alexandria, Va., will be constructed soon by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., it was announced yesterday.

Disclosure of the New York insurance company's plans for the development—designed to help meet the demand created by the area's defense boom—followed the filing of a deed yesterday covering the purchase of a 200-acre tract bounded by Seminary Road, Four Mile Run and Beverley Hills near the Arlington-Alexandria boundary.

Acting for the company, Attorney Gardner L. Booth will present the plans to the Alexandria City Council at its meeting Tuesday. Construction is expected to begin as soon as details are approved by Alexandria zoning and planning authorities.

Cost of the land is said to have been $250,000, and the company is reported ready to spend more than seven million dollars on construction, according to informed real estate circles.

Y. M. C. A. Boosts Membership By 727 Names

A total of 727 new members have been signed up by the Central Young Men's Christian Association in its current membership campaign, it was reported last night at a meeting of volunteer workers in the Y. M. C. A. Building, 1736 G Street Northwest.

Of the total, 242 were signed up since last Monday. The division of workers led by Harold D. Krafft enrolled 84 since Monday to lead the other divisions since then, while the team headed by William Stanley enrolled 61 during the four-day period to lead the teams. B. E. Phillips enrolled 36 since Monday to lead the individual workers during the four days. The campaign was launched on the evening of October 14 and is to continue to November 4.

Eric Severeid, news commentator of the Columbia Broadcasting System, in a brief address told of the problems of broadcasting the news and of some of his own experiences while serving as commentator for C. B. S. in France, London and elsewhere.

8th Dope Ring Suspect Seized

Washington police and Federal agents took into custody the eighth member of an alleged dope ring here and in Baltimore with the arrest of a 33-year-old man last night.

The suspect was arrested at First and H Streets Northwest by Sergts. Robert Bryant and H. H. Carper, of the narcotics squad. Twelve ounces of heroin were found on his person. He was charged with violation of the Harrison Narcotic Act.

Friends Remember

Eddie Byrnes, A Friendly Man, Dies

This can't be a conventional obituary because not much is known about Edward Joseph (Eddie) Byrnes except that he had "a heart of gold and a world of friends."

That's what they say about him around the Shorenam Building, Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest, where he had peddled newspapers for the past two years.

That's how they feel, too, because a $150 fund to give him a fitting funeral and a decent burial was raised in less time than it took Eddie to sell an armful of papers.

Could Have Raised More

"He was so well liked and the response was so great that we could easily have raised $500 if it had been needed," said Benjamin Rich, owner-manager of the drug store in the building, who took charge of funeral arrangements.

Eddie Byrnes' only claim to fame resulted from the Presidential campaign last year when he got his picture in the papers for his advocacy of a third term. The photograph showed him at his stand with a huge picture of President Roosevelt propped up behind the papers, and on at least two occasions after the campaign Mrs. Roosevelt was seen to stop her car at the corner and exchange a few words with the news vendor.

That was his claim to fame, and his only fortune, in the words of Rich, was a fund of "generosity, sympathy and amiability."

He explained: "If he made $5 he would give $4 of it away—to anybody who seemed to need it or asked for it. He was a sucker for panhandlers.

Pigeons Came Regularly

"Why, even the pigeons came around regularly, twice a day, for peanuts. I told him I'd be glad to give him bread for the pigeons, but he insisted on buying peanuts."

Among the facts about Eddie Byrnes' life known here are that he was born in New York City, where he worked for years as a stage property man, and was forced to give up that work when he lost three fingers of one hand in an automobile crash.

He had said also that he had two daughters on the stage. Friends suspect they may be famous actresses, because he never divulged their names, even on his deathbed, apparently for fear the public would learn the actress' father was a newspaper vendor.

Byrnes was stricken with a heart attack ten days ago at his rooming house, 463 I Street Northwest. He took a taxi to George Washington Hospital, where he died last Wednesday.

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. today at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, of which he was a member. The church has donated a plot in Mount Olivet Cemetery for the burial.

City Pay Rise To Await Legal Clarification

District officials agreed yesterday that automatic pay increases should be granted at once to classified municipal employes eligible under the Ramspeck-Meade Act, but decided to defer action pending clarification of certain legal aspects.

It was revealed, at the same time, that the Commissioners recently asked the Budget Bureau to authorize a District deficiency appropriation of about $115,000 for automatic pay advances for the final three-quarters of the current fiscal year.

The city officials have yet to receive an answer from the bureau, it was reported.

Commissioner Guy Mason has indorsed the plan for promotions within grades. He took this position after District Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton advised him a ruling by Controller General Lindsay Warren on the act would apply to the District.

Warren ruled the new pay promotion act was "mandatory" regardless of whether Congress had made specific appropriations to cover automatic increases.

While agreeing with Commissioner Mason's objective, Pilkerton said last night he would submit a report advising the City Heads to take two steps before they authorized pay increases.

He suggested first that the Budget Bureau be asked to rule on the pending request for funds to cover the pay boosts and, second, that the Controller General rule specifically on whether the Ramspeck-Meade Act superseded a $50,000 limitation on automatic stepups written into the current appropriation act.

Officials said some 5200 District workers would be affected ultimately by the Controller General's ruling Friday, but that, as of October 1, only about half of this number are immediately eligible for pay raises.

Legion Post No. 33 Will Install Officers

Government Printing Office Post No. 33, of the American Legion, will conduct installation of officers for the coming year at 9 o'clock tonight.

A dinner at 7 p. m. will precede the ceremonies and a dance will follow. A. E. Geigengack, Public Printer, will be the principal speaker.

House Group Urges Loans For ADA Here

A House District Subcommittee yesterday recommended that the District Alley Dwelling Authority be empowered to borrow funds from public or private sources, pledging its own assets as security, without obligating the District or Federal governments.

In a report to the subcommittee on the Authority's work, Executive Officer John Ihlder stated that 3815 dwellings have been or are being built in the District. A total of 1819 slum houses have been demolished by the ADA and the Federal Government combined, he said.

"Today, in the light of the national defense problem, we are emphasizing construction and not demolition," he declared.

Limited by Law

Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, a subcommittee member, said, "There's a bad condition of congestion here in Washington. The general welfare being your objective, the public health and safety is endangered. Can't your agency go in when such conditions exist and tear down the old buildings?"

Ihlder replied that the ADA is limited by law to bettering living conditions only in blocks in which there are alley dwellings and where the cost of property does not exceed $1.50 per square foot.

"We are excluded from some of the worst slum areas in the center of the city because the value of land and building exceeds $1.50 per square foot," he said.

Receiving High Returns

Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, testifying on behalf of the measure, told the subcommittee that in certain areas are "some of the most distressing slums you'll find anywhere in America."

He said that in sections of the Southwest many property owners were withheld from cleaning up their property because one or two owners were unwilling to improve conditions.

Many are receiving returns of 500 and 600 per cent on assessed property and "laugh at the idea" of selling their property to the ADA at the 30 per cent above the assessed valuation which the authority can pay.

Representative Lucien Maciora (Democrat), of Connecticut, the subcommittee chairman, said, "I'm safe in saying that the District Committee is willing at all times to act to bring in improvements in housing conditions. I'm in favor of clearing them out, and clearing them out as soon as possible."

Ihlder pointed out that there is a shortage of homes of any description here at present, and that the important thing to the ADA is to complete as much new housing as possible before going back to demolition work.

"Miss Energy"

Food Show Queen Is Mary McCracken

Miss Mary Jane McCracken, 17-year-old senior at Western High School, was selected "Miss Energy" last night at the second annual Food Show of the Independent Food Distributors of the District in Riverside Stadium.

Final session of the show will be held tonight.

Miss McCracken, an attractive blonde, lives at 3010 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest. She received a complete clothing outfit as a prize. The contest was sponsored by the Employing Bakers Association of the District.

Miss Leslie Schafer, 16, and Miss Gerry Newman, 17, were selected as runners-up and received prizes of $25 and $10, respectively. Miss Barbara Henderson was selected queen of United Food Stores, and will compete with four other "queens" representing District chain stores for the title of "Queen of Queens" tonight.

A 1942 Pontiac and a number of food prizes will be among the awards.

Senate Report Expected Soon On Police Bill

Final Senate subcommittee action on the Cochran bill providing for 100 additional District police is expected in the next few days, following an executive hearing conducted by a District Appropriations subcommittee yesterday.

Results of the subcommittee's hearings, at which police officials testified, were withheld by the chairman, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

Supt. of Police Edward Kelly told the subcommittee that a general increase in the District force is decidedly necessary. Under present conditions it is impossible to assign enough men to patrol the streets, he said.

Stating that there are now only 138 men to patrol the streets between the hours of 4 p. m. and midnight, he said that an increase would allow the creation of smaller patrol areas.

Maj. Kelly testified that in some sections a patrolman can pass one spot on his beat only once due to the large patrol areas. Good patrol practice dictates that a policeman pass a given spot at least six or seven times, he said.

Others appearing before the subcommittee, all of whom urged the increase, were Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, author of the measure; Commissioner Charles Kutz and Walter L. Fowler, District budget director.

The Cochran measure came to the subcommittee after the Senate Appropriations Committee had eliminated it from the lend-lease bill.

Indians Crush Colonials in Night Game, 48-0

Colonials Unable To Halt Surprise Attack of Indians In Smoky Battle

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 24.—George Washington's football fortunes hit a new low in Foreman Field here tonight when William and Mary crushed the Colonials, 48-0, in an unexpected display of power coupled with the complete collapse of any G. W. defense.

The Indians scored twice in the second period on short line bucks and in what must have been one of the most miserable periods in Colonial grid history, pushed over four touchdowns with an assortment of long scoring dashes in the third. They added a final in the fourth.

The 8500 spectators watched the game under strange conditions in the dimly lit stadium. Smoke from a forest fire which has been burning for more than two weeks in Dismal Swamp, across the Elizabeth River, started settling on the field at game time and by the fourth quarter the teams could barely be seen.

Guessing Contest

Visiting scouts, scarcely able to see which team had the ball, gave up at the half, and it was strictly a guessing contest from the press box. The only sure thing was that one team was making one long touchdown dash after the other—and it wasn't G. W.

George Washington increased its negative record, that of scoreless periods, to 16 straight as for the fourth straight game they failed to score. The Colonials came out of the first half with seven yards in the red and made only 55 in the second, for four first downs.

Jimmy Howard, a senior back from Richmond, was head man in that William and Mary scoring parade with three touchdowns to one each for Harvey Johnson, Jimmy Hickey, Harlie Masters and Red Irwin. Four times Johnson stepped back for perfect conversions, Howard added another and Johnny Korczowski added a sixth. Howard was the only one to miss from the placement line.

Repeatedly Blocked

The Indians were repeatedly blocked on scoring drives in the first period and G. W. took the two-minute intermission, complimented with a scoreless deadlock. Coming events cast their shadows in the second quarter as the Indians scored twice. Howard going over from the 2 for the first after a 47-yard drive.

The second touchdown was a careless act on the part of Scott Gudmundson, who let Hickey's punt glance off his knee on the G. W. 10 and the alert Tex Warrington recovered. Hickey scored easily in three plays.

The Indians, defending State champions, were a flashy lot in the third period as they rolled up their fifth victory of the season, against a defeat by Navy. On the third play, Johnson broke away and dashed 51 yards on for a spectacular touchdown play.

Korczowski intercepted a pass which paved the way to the second and on a reverse play which was a

Illinois Turf Board Starts Inquiries

Three Fail to Answer Request to Appear At Hearing; Horse Is Now Guarded

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The thoroughbred Hasty Notion, now under guard of detectives at the Laurel, Md., race track was identified by witnesses at a hearing today as the "ringer," Rapid Bone, which raced to victory at Hawthorne track, Chicago, September 24, at odds of $18.40 to $2.

The identification was made as the Illinois racing board opened an investigation of the case, with representatives of the State's attorney's office and the U. S. District attorney's office in attendance to determine whether criminal action might be brought against the principals involved.

R. V. C. Van Cleve, horseman of Abilene, Tex., who was listed as owner and trainer of Rapid Bone, failed to answer a request to appear at the hearing. William S. Rafferty and his aunt, Mrs. George Ehinger, both of Philadelphia, said to be owners of the horse, also failed to appear.

After an all-day session, the hearing was continued until next Tuesday.

Hamilton Identifies Horse

Identification of the horse was made by William Hamilton, steward representing the racing board; Brad Brodsky, of Philadelphia, who sold the horse to Rafferty for $9500; Jockey Ralph Bohn, who rode the thoroughbred in the two Chicago races, and others.

Brodsky, who purchased the horse in a claiming race for $5500 from Joseph E. Widener, said he disposed of the animal to Rafferty at Havre de Grace race track and that he had instructed his trainer, Harry Baker, to report the sale to the racing secretary, but Baker said he failed to do that.

Truckers and railway express men then gave testimony which traced the movements of Hasty Notion from the time the horse was shipped from Havre de Grace until he was placed under guard at Laurel three weeks later. This testimony showed that Hasty Notion was shipped from Baltimore on September 17 to Chicago and was shipped out again to Philadelphia on September 30.

Received $200

Jockey Bohn said he never saw Van Cleve or the horse until five minutes before the race on September 24. Bohn said Van Cleve, representing the horse as a first starter, gave him these instructions: "Don't bother any other horse in the race, but give him a clean ride. The horse can win. If he does there will be a stake waiting for you when you get back." Bohn, hesitant about admitting what the stake was, said he received $200.

Temple Stops Bisons, 41-14; Still Unbeaten

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—Temple's undefeated and untied football Owls smashed Bucknell, 41 to 14, for their fifth straight victory before 18,000 here tonight. Fullback George Sutch ran 79 yards for the first score in the opening minutes and the Owls ran up 41-0 lead before the Bisons got their two touchdowns in the closing minutes on a long forward pass and a blocked kick.

Except for a brief time in the second quarter when they reached the Temple four-yard line and again in the waning moments the Bisons were kept busy attempting to halt the thrusts of the powerful Owls led by Sutch and "Handy" Andy Tomasic.

Tomasic, who gained more than 800 yards in Temple's four previous games, ripped off a total of 164 against the Bisons. He gained 106 yards from scrimmage, scored one touchdown, threw two passes for 14 yards and returned punts 44 yards. He got loose for a 54-yard run early in the game, but it was nullified by a penalty.

Altogether Temple rolled up 18 first downs to seven and gained 310 yards from scrimmage to 15 in shoving over six touchdowns and booting five extra points.

Michigan, Minnesota In Top Game Today

Record Crowd of 85,753 Expected To See Clash of Unbeaten Elevens

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 24.—Amid all the hoop-de-doo and hoopla which rarely has been associated with college football since the 1929 boom days, it will be unbeaten-untied Michigan against unbeaten-untied Minnesota tomorrow in what is undoubtedly the grade-A game of the day and may prove to be the most vital combat of the season.

The game has set this pleasant college town on its collective ear, to the extent of a total sellout of the 85,753 seats in the Michigan Stadium, which will set a record for the stadium and for this series; ticket scalping which has jacked up a pair of $3.30 seats to $25, and the customary pregame bonfires and pep rallies.

The fact that all-American Tom Harmon is a graduate now is one of the factors which has made Minnesota the favorite, with most bookies giving six points. But your correspondent, who had the Wolverines come through for him over favored Northwestern a week ago, is stringing with Michigan, making that and other selections for the following reasons (home teams listed first, probable attendance in parentheses):

Michigan-Minnesota (85,753)—The line: First-string edge to the Wolverines, reserve strength on Minnesota's side. The backfield: Power even, slight edge in speed and depth to the Gophers, better punting and perhaps passing to Michigan. Off that, and Minnesota's string of seven straight in this series the Gophers are the logical choice. So if this is largely a hunch—coupled with the prediction Michigan will do a lot of passing—the choice here still is Michigan.

Texas-Rice (42,000)—If Bob Brumley were in shape, this would be more even. As it is, it looks a safe fifth straight for Texas.

Ohio State-Northwestern (73,500) Provided the Wildcats don't have their minds beyond this one on Minnesota, they should take it. Northwestern, in a battle.

Fordham-Texas Christian (35,000). It is the Rams' misfortune, in the year they have their best offensive team, to have each rival knocked off before it gets to Fordham. That

Villanova Upset, 9-6, By Manhattan

By the United Press

New York, Oct. 24.—An alert, hard-hitting Manhattan College football team bounced back from two defeats tonight to register a 9-8 upset over favored Villanova, blasting the Wildcats' perfect record before more than 20,000 fans at the Polo Grounds.

The lightly regarded Manhattan Jaspers, who had lost their last two games to Duquesne and Boston College, garnered a safety, a touchdown and a point kick in the second period for the triumph that ended Villanova's supremacy after eight straight victories over Manhattan.

Manhattan got its first tally in the second period after Kiesecker kicked out of bounds on Villanova's 5-yard stripe. Al Postus, of Villanova was thrown by John Sesko behind the goal line for a safety and two points.

After a punting exchange, the touchdown was made. Don Binder, of Manhattan, recovered Joe Yednoch's fumble on the Wildcats' 17-yard line. Then Ed Finkoski passed to Sesko for first down on the 2-yard stripe. Villanova held on the 1-yard line and kicked out to its own 28. On the first play Charlie McNulty skirted his own left end and sprinted over the goal line for Manhattan's touchdown. Jim Worst kicked the point.

A recovered fumble set the stage for Villanova's tally in the third quarter. Paul Kasky recovered Harry Ulrich's fumble on the Manhattan 25. Line smashes reached the 13, where Zig Zamlynski passed to Joe Pezelski to put the ball on the 2-yard stripe. Then Zamlynski plunged through center for the touchdown. He missed the point kick.

25,000 May See Hoyas Battle Eagles

By Jack Munhall

Post Staff Writer

Boston, Oct. 24.—Football giants of a year ago, but now dwarfed in size by two current defeats apiece, Jesuit rivals, Georgetown and Boston College, will oppose their elevens for the tenth time tomorrow before an expected crowd of 25,000 Fenway Park fans. The Eagles have won five and tied one in the series.

Georgetown, seeking its first major victory since upsetting Mississippi, 16 to 6, in its opener, has high hopes of avenging last year's disastrous defeat by the Eagles, but it is likely that the Hoyas will get no headache relief from this kind of B. C.

Similarly, Boston College's huge team, rated highly in preseason notice, but bowled over by both Tulane and Clemson, anticipates a bitter battle from its visitors. And from this corner it appears that tomorrow's struggle between two "hungry" teams may approach, yes

Zany Arkansas Boll Weevils Off Again—for 8000 Miles

By the Associated Press

Monticello, Ark., Oct. 24.—Collegiate football's Vagabonds—Arkansas A. and M. College's slightly zany Boll Weevils, packed tonight for a road trip that'll make all other gridiron excursions seem like a visit to the corner drug store.

The wandering Weevils, whose travels and unorthodox style have brought them lots of fun, no little renown and precious few victories, will be gone from the campus 32 days. They'll travel approximately 8000 miles and, incidentally, appear in six games.

Their opposition has been surprised in the past by what the Weevils solemnly call their offense but this time the opposition and spectators too will be treated to a display that could be produced only by the Weevils or by lightning striking a rainbow.

The Arkansas wanderers have some brand new jerseys but no two of them are the same color or pattern.

Coach Stewart A. Ferguson, a serious little Scotchman, explained the new outfits not only were more colorful, but also more economical —they are known to the trade as samples.

The Weevils play Bradley Tech Monday night at Peoria, Ill., October 30 they will meet Moravian College at Bethlehem, Pa.; November 1, Upsala College at East Orange, N. J.; November 8, St Francis College at Loretta, Pa.; November 15, Davis and Elkins College at Elkins, W. Va.; November 22, Evansville (Ind.) College. In between games they'll go on sightseeing rides over the countryside.

Ferguson became coach with the understanding he would [illegible] paid a cent as such, that he wouldn't have to conduct organized practice and would not be expected to win a game.

Docket Wins Via Outside Rush

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Horse racing for the sport of it comes back to Pimlico on Thursday. It's the Pimlico Special, of course, and a former bricklayer, a Wyoming rancher and an airplane parts manufacturer will race their horses on a winner-take-all basis. The public will be betting that way, too, because they won't be permitted to hedge with place and show wagers. Horses, owners and bettors will be going for the works.

POVICH

Young Alfred Vanderbilt, who moved into Pimlico as the chief stockholder a few years ago and roused the sleepy old track out of its lethargy, has sponsored the Pimlico Special as his pet race. With the modest $10,000 winner-take-all purse, he has attempted to put the race on a sporting basis, appealing to horsemen's sense of competition to enter their steeds.

Three men have accepted the issue, Edwin S. Moore, the Circle M Ranch owner, who has entered his 5-year-old Big Pebble; Louis Tufano, who is putting his Market Wise in the race, and Roy Martin, owner of the 4-year-old Haltal. Other horse owners have ducked the race, notable William Woodward, owner of Fenelon; Albert Sabbath, owner of Alsaby and Samuel Riddle, owner of War Relic.

Vanderbilt is nursing more than a mild gripe toward such as the millionaires Woodward and Riddle who have failed to cooperate in the race. There is the hint that these rich men, who should be less concerned with the size of the purse than those who have entered, are evincing no proper spirit. Sabath Alsab's owner, is readily forgiven by Vanderbilt for declining the invitation.

The youthful Pimlico track president pointed out yesterday that Sabbath begged off on entirely reasonable grounds. As owner of the year's wonder horse which had become the winter-book favorite for the Derby, and which also had the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap in sight, Sabbath wished to avoid all criticism in the handling of Alsab, particularly the charge that he would be overraced.

Owner Took Over Training

"Last summer when Alsab's trainer, Gus Swenke, was sick, Mr. Sabbath took over the training of the horse for a month," Pimlico Publicity Man Dave Wood pointed out, "and there was considerable criticism from track people. After all, Mr. Sabbath is an attorney, not a racing man, and when Alsab was sent through those sensational workouts there was the cry that he was leaving his race on the track in the morning. Alsab came through to set track records, but Mr. Sabbath was worried for fear of any unfavorable public reaction and he intends to be exceedingly careful henceforth."

The Pimlico people are not so ready to excuse Sam Riddle for failing to enter War Relic, conqueror of Whirlaway. Vanderbilt arranged it so that Riddle's invitation to enter the race was presented in person by Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, but the octogenarian Riddle has never deigned to favor Pimlico with any sort of a reply to the bid. Riddle has had no great affection for Pimlico, incidentally, ever since the track handicapper weighted his Crusader with 132 pounds in a Pimlico Cup race several years ago, a race which Edith Cavell, packing only 99 pounds, won.

But despite the absence of such as War Relic and Whirlaway and Alsab and Fenelon, Vanderbilt will be putting on a show for the folks Thursday. In Market Wise he is presenting the only horse that ever beat Whirlaway at equal weights this year. In the Jockey Club Gold Cup Whirlaway looked Market Wise in the eye in the final furlongs, but it was Whirlaway which finally weakened. When Attention and War Relic beat Whirlaway, they were both favored by the weights.

Market Wise's owner, Mr. Tufano, has already planned to make a gala event of the day's racing Thursday. He will come down to Pimlico from New York with his party in the special car of the President of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Huge banners will adorn the train, which will be known as "The Market Wise Special."

Market Wise Another Bargain Horse

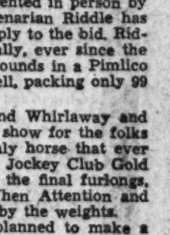
Market Wise is one of the bargain colts of the year, having been bought by Mr. Tufano from Mrs. Sloan, along with two other horses, for a lump price of $3000. It was after Market Wise beat Whirlaway at Belmont that Mrs. Sloan remarked to her trainer, Fontaine, "Now you can go and sit with Jim Fitzsimmons." Fitzsimmons, it should be noted, is the Wheatley Stable trainer who sold Seabiscuit to Charles S. Howard just before the Biscuit started to run to fame.

At Pimlico on Thursday, this generation of racing fans will get its first glimpse of the 27-year-old wonder horse Exterminator, incidentally. Mrs. Willis Sharpe Kilmer has kindly consented to permit her famed gelding to appear on the track for the Exterminator Handicap, one of Thursday's co-features. Exterminator, which set track records in the United States, Mexico and Canada over all distances from 4½ furlongs to 2 miles, was another bargain horse. Used chiefly as a workhorse for Sun Briar as a 2-year-old, he was trained and ridden by Willie Knapp for the 1917 Kentucky Derby, and won it. At Pimlico he will be returning to the scene of his three victories in four starts in the 2¼-mile Pimlico Cup.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 24.—Speaking as one who was burned in effigy at the Naval Academy, and seared to a cinder at West Point, for suggesting that the service football teams of 1939 and 1940 were a couple of bizarre blights, let us say that it is a fine thing for the morale of our conscript Army and the country at large that this much of the 1941 football season has passed without an Army or a Navy loss.



CONSIDINE

Whatever happens tomorrow when Army meets Columbia at West Point and Navy tackles Harvard at Boston, their seasons have represented a comforting improvement over the abyss into which each fell a couple of years ago. Truth is that football, in their cases, can no longer be just a dash of sweaty horseplay.

These are times when the country is turning a hopeful eye on its armed forces. The era of the country-clubby Army and Navy life began to disappear about the time of Munich, but the two academy football teams which typify the condition of our armed forces, in the public's mind, kept descending down the ladder of the game.

It would have been difficult to find two teams much worse than Army and Navy were when they came up to the Army-Navy game of 1939. Last year Navy improved but Army became so hilariously disorganized that the Cadets looked like the Phillies trying to muscle into a world series. Its only victory of the year was a one-point decision over Williams in the opening game. Cornell whipped it 45-0 and Penn 48-0.

Should Get Best Teams Available

We think that until peace once again turns out military men into a vast gentleman's club, that the academies should follow Eichelberger's leanings and get the best teams available. We think that the schools should go out and bring 'em in just as aggressively as do our major foundries. West Point and Annapolis have the best sports equipment in the world, and are professional in that the Cadets and Midship-

A third-period touchdown by Billy Dellastatious, left halfback, and an extra-point pass from Dan O'Connell, right half, to John Harvill, right end, were the elements of Tech's 7-to-0 victory yesterday over Roosevelt at the Roosevelt Stadium.

The Maroons' score culminated a 50-year drive, of which Sonny Morrisette gained 20 and Jimmy Gilmore 23. Tech almost lost the ball on downs, when on the 5-yard line. A fourth-down pass from O'Connell to Bill Demory was incomplete but Referee Sweeney ruled interference so Tech retained the ball, with first down and goal to go.

Goes Over for Score

Morrisette took the ball through center for 5 yards and Dellastatious, on the next play, crossed the double strip over right guard.

Scrimmaging during the first two quarters took place between the 30-yard lines, with neither team being able to break through the other's defense. Passing was notably absent during the first half with only three passes thrown and the first one didn't even come 'til about the final two minutes of the second quarter.

The only real first-half scoring threat was Tech's, which came just after the second quarter opened. Capt. Dick Koester of Roosevelt kicked from his own 20. The kick was high and a strong wind forced the ball down on the Roosevelt 30.

Tech Loses Ball

Line thrusts by Sonny Morrisette, Tech halfback, and Jimmy Gilmore, substitute halfback, advanced the ball to Roosevelt's 8, where Tech lost the ball on downs.

Koester, Irwin Lust and Bill Garner played well for the losers, and Morrisette and Gilmore, who, incidentally, is a freshman playing his first game of high school football, were outstanding for Tech.

Navy Facing Test Today in Harvard Game

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 24.—Reaching the midway point in its schedule, unconquered Navy tackles Harvard's twice-beaten but rapidly improving eleven at Cambridge tomorrow—the Middies' last chance in regular combat to perfect themselves for the showdown with unbeaten Pennsylvania the week hence.

The Sailors should mark up their fifth consecutive triumph tomorrow, having better reserve corps, the advantage in punting and a defense which has kept William and Mary, West Virginia, Lafayette and Cornell from crossing its goal line.

But the contest will be no snap for the future admirals. Dick Harlow reputedly has a team now about on the par with Cornell. The Big Red gave Navy fits last Saturday before bowing, 14-0.

Harlow's teams are noted for their ability to bottle up a stronger opponents' offense. So tomorrow's setto should test the Middies' offensive resources before the all-important clash with the Quakers November 1 at Philadelphia.

Terp Frosh Deadlock G. W., 6-All

Maryland University's freshmen gained a 6-to-6 tie with the George Washington University Frosh yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

The Terp yearlings scored on a pass, Paul Werner to "Pug" Wissinger, good for 8 yards in the second period. The touchdown was the culmination of a 50-yard sustained drive. "Curley" Byrd's try for the extra point was wide.

The Colonials tallied early in the initial period. Fullback Joe Bernot plunged over from the 1-yard line. A 21-yard pass from Seno to Birch put the ball in scoring position. Seno's placekick fell short.

Eastern's Adams Goes Down in a Heap of Indians

Herby Adams, Eastern High's ace ball carrier, picked up only 3 yards on this off-tackle slant in the third period of yesterday's interhigh battle with Anacostia, but he wasn't throttled all afternoon. His 66-yard dash gave the Tide its only score as the Indians ground out a 13-6 decision

Arkansas' Field Goal Beats Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Oct. 24.—With two seconds to play, Halfback Dave Scarborough kicked an 18-yard field goal tonight and booted the University of Detroit football Titans from the Nation's undefeated ranks as the Arkansas Razorbacks achieved a stunning 9 to 6 upset before 21,202 spectators.

With thrice-beaten Arkansas seemingly headed to a 6 to 6 tie, a result Coach Fred Thomsen probably would have pronounced satisfactory, the Razorbacks pounced on a final desperate opportunity when Elmer (Tippy) Madarik of Detroit fumbled on his own 18. A pass play failed and Scarborough, sophomore blocking back, was called into action.

At a moderately difficult angle Halfback Dave Jones placed the ball at the toe of Scarborough, who booted it squarely between the uprights. There was time for just one more play, the kickoff to Detroit.

The winning kick ended a four-game winning streak compiled by Coach Gus Dorais' team which had entered the game heavily favored.

Detroit scored in the first period, with Madarik skipping over from the 2-yard line at the payoff end of a 36-yard thrust. Quarterback Art Link missed the try for extra point.

The Razorbacks charged back in the third period on a 76-yard touchdown parade with Halfback Leslie Ross plunging over from the 1. Arkansas required six plays in this advance, Halfback Robert (Chic) Forte tossing a 40-yard aerial to Ross to set up the scoring thrust. Scarborough, attempting the conversion, missed the kick but he more than squared his personal record in the thrilling finish.

Kenosha Signs Rankin, Former Purdue Star

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 24 (AP).—The Kenosha Cardinals, independent professional football team, announced today the signing of Dave Rankin, who played end at Purdue last year and won All-American rating.

Rankin captained the collegiate All-Star team which played the Chicago Bears last August.

The Bears obtained Rankin in the National Football League draft but did not place him on their regular players' list because he expects to enter the Army Air Corps soon.

Central's Last-Half Offensive Wins, 7 to 6

Vikings Open Up at Start of Third Period To Overcome 6-0 Margin of W.-L. High

Roaring back in the second half with the fury of their Norse namesakes, Central High's gallant Viking gridders overcame a 6-to-0 lead to nip Washington and Lee's hard-hitting Generals, 7 to 6, at Central Stadium yesterday in a game that kept hearts jumping for 40 minutes.

Playing without the services fo it's line-wrecking fullback, Jim Kurtz, Central put on the pressure to beat one of the hottest rivals on its schedule. Both teams entered the game with three wins and no losses.

All through the game the Vikings' vaunted line lived up to it's advertising, matching blow for blow with the Generals' flashy backs. Led by Hubert Tucker, who spent most of the afternoon in the visitors' backfield, the Central line rushed passers, broke up plays and pounced on three fumbles to call a halt to Generals' drives.

Vikings Get Quick Score

Central's score came with lightning-like swiftness in the opening minutes of the second half. Sprinkle fumbled the kick-off on his own 30 and a horde of Vikings pounced on the ball to set up the score. On the first play of the half, Valanos pitched a strike to Bob Hill, who took the ball in stride on the 8 and scored standing up. Jack Samperton's game-winning conversion split the uprights.

The Generals' score came quickly in the second quarter on a perfectly executed screen pass. After Jim Sprinkle had returned a Valanos punt to midfield, two tries at the line failed, then Sprinkle faded to pass. The entire Central line charged in and Sprinkle lobbed the ball to Eddie De Celle, who ran the remaining 50 yards behind a touring party of Generals to score untouched. De Celle's plunge for the point was short.

Generals Threaten

The Generals had threatened earlier in the quarter when Sprinkle completed a third down, 30-yard pass to Mel Winfield, who took the ball over his shoulder and was immediately downed on the 18. On the first play, the ball was centered to nobody in particular and Bernie Grosbine recovered for Central on the 30 to end the threat.

Frequent fumbles and penalties slowed the attack of both teams when they were on the march. The Generals pried open the center of the Central line to shake backs loose on long gains deep in their own territory but were unable to gain effectively once across the 50.

Landon Beats Little Hoyas; Cady Is Star

Landon School still was able to boast the only undefeated, untied and unscored-on scholastic record in town yesterday following its 7-0 victory over Georgetown Prep on the Leland gridiron.

A first-period dash by Quarterback Charley Cady accounted for Landon's margin, as it captured its fourth straight game. After that the Lelanders were satisfied to hold their lead.

They played hard enough, however, to take a 108 to 40 yard edge in rushing, complete 4 out of 7 passes to Prep's 3 out of 10, and hang up 6 first downs to its foes' 4.

It was the second offensive play of the game in which Cady headed out over his right wing from the Prep 45 and sprinted goalward, deciding the game. Walter Johnson took a short toss from Cady for the conversion.

The Little Hoyas' big threat came in the fourth period when a Cady pass was intercepted on the 35 and moved to the 12. Four downs, however, netted only 2 yards. Landon had two other scoring opportunities when Cady tried field goals from the 20 and 34-yard lines, but each time he missed.

Terps in High Spirits on Eve Of Penn Game

By the Associated Press

Maryland's footballers brushed up both their offense and defense in a brief final workout yesterday for the Penn clash in Philadelphia today.

The Terps displayed plenty of spirit and gave the impression that they have enough talent and fortitude to give the Quakers just about as much of a fight as they have received in their past three games.

They also appeared keen in going through their plays, running with snap and tossing with accuracy.

The gridders, who will leave by train this morning, will be accompanied by the student band, cheer leaders, athletic officials and some of the higher-ups, including President H. C. Byrd, who, as a coach, upset Penn in 1923.

Montgomery Wins Easily Over Kogon

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—Bobcat Bob Montgomery, of Philadelphia, top-ranking contender for hte world's lightweight championship, registered his twelfth consecutive victory tonight by pounding out a popular ten-round decision over Julie Kogon, New Haven, Conn., at the Coliseum.

The lanky Philadelphia Negro, with a ceaseless and punishing body attack, was credited with winning seven of the ten rounds.

Xavier U. Beats St. Louis, 8 to 0

St. Louis, Oct. 24 (AP).—Xavier University of Cincinnati rallied its forces for a 90-yard touchdown march in the second quarter tonight and added two more points on a final period safety for an 8-0 victory over St. Louis University of the Missouri Valley Confereence.

Passing out of the infant stage into full manhood, Anacostia High's grid team yesterday showed its mother school, Eastern, a few things about football as it registered a 13-to-6 triumph at Eastern Stadium.

One of the largest crowds of the interhigh season was on hand to see the Indians, in public school gridiron competition for their fourth year, conclusively conquer a White Tide eleven with 50 years of action behind it.

It was Anacostia's first triumph over the school from which it drew most of its students, and it was one of those students whose play was responsible for the Tide's downfall. Paul Blaine, squat triple-threat who couldn't make the Eastern junior varsity three years ago, passed to the winning touchdown and generally proved himself the best back on the field.

The triumph just about sewed up eastern division honors and a berth in the interhigh championship playoff for Anacostia, though the Indians have another game to play, and Eastern has two.

Tied at Half

Going into the second half all even at 6-6, after Eastern had knotted the count on a 66-yard dash by Herby Adams, it was Blaine who set up as well as executed the winning score. Running the opening kickoff back to his own 47, Paul hurled on the first play to Elmer Leukhardt on the Tide 40. The latter stiff-armed four tacklers as he moved to the Eastern 10.

One pass play failed, the Indians drew a 15-yard holding penalty to the 23, but from that point Blaine went to work. He took Grant Davidson's lateral and tossed with telling effect to Jim Flaherty on the goal line. Flaherty was forced to dive for the ball, but came up with it nicely, concluding scoring for the game. Blaine then converted from placement.

After that the boys from the "flats" played a cozy game. They were content to hold the Tide safe.

Proving the extent of their power pretty conclusively, the Indians also took the first-half kickoff straight down the field to score. Contributing to the advance from Anacostia's 36 were a 15-yard center smash by Eddie Hoffman and Blaine's 33-yard aerial to Leukhardt. From the Eastern 9 the Indians pulled what has become their favorite play—a screened shovel pass.

Davidson shot the ball at little Frank Burback behind a horde of Anacostia blockers and Burback circled right end for 6 points. Blaine failed on the conversion—one of his few failures of the afternoon.

Mayor LaGuardia, DiMaggio Trade Felicitations

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia today said he had received the following telegram from Joe DiMaggio, Yankee baseball star, who became a father yesterday:

"A new Yankee slugger. Seven pounds, 11 ounces. A natural. Good luck to you in your coming election. Can't miss. Best from missus and myself."

To which the Mayor replied:

"My Dear Little Joe: Congratulations on your arrival and on your wisdom in selecting New York City to play your first game. You are fortunate in the selection of your talented and charming parents. Eric (the Mayor's son) sends you regards and says that when you play your first game he does not want to throw out the first ball, but wants to play on the team. Love to your mother and dad."

Green Terrors Bow, 14-0, To Boston

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 24.—Boston University's Terriers stabbed through Western Maryland's line tonight for touchdowns in the first and second periods, then withstood several Green Terror counterattacks to win a night football engagement, 14 to 0.

The New Englanders went to work right after the kickoff, with Frank Provinzano tossing a 20-yard pass to Fullback Pete Lamana, who was downed on the Green Terrors' 6. Lamana went through right tackle for the touchdown. Wally Williams converted from placement.

Manny Kaplan's kicking held Boston at bay most of the second period, but with three minutes before the intermission, Lamana cut through center and raced 59 to the Terror 5-yard line. It took four downs to push over, but Boston was offside on the touchdown play and, after being penalized to the 5, Provinzano galloped across on a weak-side reverse. Williams placekicked the extra point.

Battle Ends In Confusion At Wilson

Official Halts Game As Fans Swarm Field With Wilson Holding Ball on 6-inch Line

With Wilson in possession of the ball on Western High's 6-inch line and a capacity crowd pouring out of the stands and onto the field, an official stepped in and picked up the pigskin, ending in a 6-6 tie a football game that had built steadily toward this climax at Wilson Stadium yesterday.

After Western had scored on a first-quarter blocked kick by Johnny Boaze, its defensive star at center, and Wilson had tied it up as a 38-yard touchdown romp by Quarterback Dick George culminated a 65-yard march at the outset of the second half, the teams battled on even terms until Western Fullback Bill Marlow fumbled and the Tigers' Charley Hardison recovered on the Raiders' six.

Marlow was hit hard by two men on a play that started on Western's 21. The ball popped out of his arms and rolled back to the six, where Hardison made his diving recovery.

Game Halted at 6-6

With the stands in an uproar, Saine plunged to the four. Western braced on the next play and held, but Wilson's third try, with the end zone surrounded by fans, ended in a pile that revealed the ball resting six inches from the end zone. At which point the man in the striped suit made himself a hero to some and a bum to the rest by stepping in and calling a halt to festivities.

But if Wilson adherents were bemoaning their ill luck in losing that last try at the goal, Westerners, too, owed a legitimate complaint to the fates which had deprived them of a second touchdown a few minutes before when Boaze had blocked his second punt, Widmayer recovering in the Wilson end zone only to have the play called back for a Western offside.

Western's touchdown came with the game eight minutes old when Wilson, following a 15-yard loss on a bad pass from center, was forced to punt out from its 5. The Raid-

Indicative of the nip-and-tuck battle staged by Central and Washington-Lee yesterday at Central Stadium is this shot of Stan Valanos (27), Viking fullback, being stopped at the line in the second period. Mike Denikos (18) attempts to give him blocking against W.-L.'s Newsome (42), Reed (78) and Sherman (76). Central finally eked out a 7-6 edge

True Call Captures Laurel Feature; Pays $23.20 Mutuel

Jockey Smith Gives Winner Good Ride

Jay Jay, Favorite, Is Second, Battle Jack Runs Third; Jumper Destroyed

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 24.—The Washington-owned colors of Mrs. Dion K. Kerr were borne to a smashing victory today in the Mistletoe Spring Purse, a fast sprint of 6 furlongs featuring the Friday program here. As far as the game True Call was concerned, it was "ladies' day" too for she turned back a pair of fast horses in Howard Bruce's Jay Jay and J. W. Y. Martin's Battle Jack. The 4-year-old daughter of Trace Call and Trousseau was excellently handled by Jockey F. A. Smith and forged to the imaginary wire a length in advance of Jay Jay, a sizzling favorite in the field of eight. Battle Jack, which set and forced the pace along with the public choice most of the way, was beaten a neck for second money.

Returns $23.20 Price

It was a three-horse race, with the other five contestants being as useful to their backers as if they had stayed in their stalls. On a program dominated for the most part by favorites, True Call stood out like a lighthouse with her win pay-off of $23.20. A crowd of 7500 saw the filly do her stuff and turn in the good time of 1:12 2-5. The track was fast and the weather on the cool side.

Smith rode a heady race on True Call. Although the filly broke on top, he made no effort to be a party to the rushing tactics applied to Jay Jay and Battle Jack. The little fellow rated True Call until the front runners showed signs of slowing. Entering the stretch, he guided True Call to the outside, put her to a drive and she had the punch. She collared the fighting leaders inside the sixteenth pole and was going away at the end.

Jumper Is Destroyed

The third horse casualty of the week occurred in the day's steeplechase. Harem Honey, a 9-year-old gelding, was setting the pace when he crashed at the seventh fence, throwing Gentleman Jockey John Bosley, jr., to the turf. Bosley, owner and trainer of the horse, was only shaken up but Harem Boy broke his leg and had to be destroyed.

Jockey H. Cruz, a Washington boy who used to ride on the flat, piloted the winner, a favorite and a son of Meridian, aptly named Greenwich Time. K. N. Gilpin's Fatty (no relation to Walter Haight) was second and Montpelier Stable's Hellograph was third. The winner paid $5.30 and was clocked in 4:01 2-5.

†J. Shouse-H. M. Babylon entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOCKET, $8.00, $5.50, $4.10; HIGH BUD, $21.20, $10.90; BILL K., $22.30.

DOCKET was in close quarters early, worked his way free on the outside and closed with a bold rush to be up in the concluding stride. HIGH BUD worked his way to contention on the outside and closed gamely. BILL K. was a forward factor from the break and came willingly in the final test. DIVIDEND was first away, set a good pace and just failed to last.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:01. Off at 2:02½. Winner, J. Grabosky's b. g. (6), by Meridian—Fast Service. Trained by A. J. Ginion. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:01⅘ (13 jumps).

†Fell. ‡Refused.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREENWICH TIME, $5.30, $3.00, $2.70; FATTY, $3.00, $3.00; HELIOGRAPH, $3.80.

GREENWICH TIME, closest to the pace of HAREM HONEY, took command between calls, gave way to FATTY and went on to win when the latter bobbled at the twelfth fence. FATTY worked his way to the top, landed poorly and was weakening at the end. HELIOGRAPH was well placed early and weakened badly after making a bad landing at the eleventh. STOCKWOOD was outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1100; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:36. Winner, Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' ch. c. (2), by Firethorn—Flying Hour. Trained by O. White. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAUGHT, $2.70, $2.40, $2.20; ONE LINK, $3.20, $2.70; WEST-HO, $3.00.

FLAUGHT was first away, drew clear, was not threatened and won with speed in reserve. ONE LINK was a prominent factor on the outside and held on with good energy. WEST-HO raced forwardly on the inside from the start and tired in the closing stages. SEAWAY was sluggish early and was held safe in the closing test.

Daily Double—DOCKET and FLAUGHT Paid $10.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:05½. Off at 3:06. Winner, Circle M. Ranch Stable's ch. c. (3), by Twink—Eau De Nil. Trained by W. T. Anderson. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE TWINK, $3.50, $2.90, $2.70; MAGIC STREAM, $6.50, $4.80; POMIVA, $4.40.

BLUE TWINK was rushed through on the inside to take command going to the turn, drew out, but had to be shaken up to resist MAGIC STREAM. The latter could not keep up early, came to the outside and closed boldly. POMIVA gained gradually throughout the running and showed a good effort. MACK'S DREAM rallied when placed to a drive and hung in the closing 20 yards.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1500; handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:38. Winner, Mrs. D. K. Kerr's b. f. (4), by Trace Call—Trousseau. Trained by D. K. Kerr. Value to winner, $1000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

SWYNSTAN	(Canning)	103	4	7	7	7	7	7	96.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUE CALL, $23.20, $6.50, $5.20; JAY JAY, $2.70, $2.30; BATTLE JACK, $2.60.

TRUE CALL, off alertly, was rated when within striking distance of the leaders, came to the outside when placed to pressure and won going away. JAY JAY raced forward and held with BATTLE JACK and held on in the final test, but could not resist the winner. BATTLE JACK was hustled to the front, withstood the challenge of JAY JAY to midstretch and then weakened gradually. RED WRACK lacked speed early and hung after moving up.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1200; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:06½. Winner, Mrs. W. Jeffords' br. c. (2), by Sickle-Wand. Trained by O. White. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:44.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CADUCEUS, $3.20, $2.40, $2.30; SWEEP SWINGER, $2.80, $2.60; BARUNA, $2.80.

CADUCEUS was steadied early while within striking distance, responded when put to a drive to take command and held SWEEP SWINGER safe in the closing test. SWEEP SWINGER worked his way to contention and hung in the closing stages. BARUNA improved his position and closed with good energy. TRELAWNY lacked speed early, moved up gamely and then faded.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:37. Winner, Cedar Farm's ar. f. (3), by Kiev—Keene Lady. Trained by T. W. Shaw, jr. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:43⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS GOSHEN, $6.80, $4.10, $3.70; JIMSON BELLE, $17.50, $8.90; MIGRATION, $5.40.

MISS GOSHEN was rated for the half, came to the outside of MIGRATION, disposed of the pacemaker and drew out to win handily. JIMSON BELLE was well placed for the half and weakened at the end. MIGRATION set a good pace for the half and tired after being displaced. PASSING CLOUD closed strongly around.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:05½. Off at 5:06. Winner, Mrs. V. Leonard's ch. g. (6), by Misstep—Strong. Trained by D. Yates. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIGHTILY, $7.10, $4.20, $3.20; STAR CHANCE, $12.40, $7.90; BALLAST REEF, $6.80.

MIGHTILY took command at the first turn, drew out and held sway thereafter and won easily. STAR CHANCE was in the thick of forward contention from the start and closed with good energy. BALLAST REEF dropped back after the half and came again on the outside. PANTHER CREEK was in close quarters between horses in the final drive and lacked racing room.

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al:

When the season is over in Maryland and somebody talks about good racing programs, I want you to pull out a clipping of today's entries at Laurel and show it around. In fifth position on the card is the $10,000 added Selima Stakes, annual distance test for 2-year-old fillies. This race runs into real money. A field of 12 has been named and and if all go there will be $24,900 for the winner with the total money $30,350. That ain't hay and as if the Selima wasn't a top flight race, Laurel is tossing in the $15,000 added Washington Handicap. The Selima has drawn Vagrancy, Light Lady, She Dast, Petrify and other "gal" stars. The Washington has lured Big Pebble, Pictor, Shot Put and six other outstanding distance veterans. Looks like Brother Stryker and his associates have hit the jack pot as far as real programs go. I settled a bet yesterday and found out there was a story behind it. Two Washington men engaged a taxi to drive them to the track for $3. On the way out they got into an argument about the names of the horses that figured in a $6000 (plus) daily double at Bowie a few years back. They finally agreed that one of the horses was Charles F. but the taxi driver maintained the other was James Pal. His fares argued that the horse was James Boy. Finally the cabman wanted to bet so the two fellows covered him for $5. I looked it up for them and James Boy was the right horse. So the taxi driver lost $2, plus the gas, his time and the wear and tear on the cab.

It was reported that Morris H. Dixon had purchased J. E. Widener's Iron Shot. Ghost Flyer, owned by E. H. Gaines, suffered a fractured leg bone while exercising yesterday. Bogert was an automatic scratch from the eighth race. Bogert won yesterday, was claimed, for $1,500 by G. C. Greer and was entered today for $1600. Because of the claim, the horse was ineligible to run for that price. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—DOUBLE B appears well placed in the day's opener. Needs only to get the right ride. BECOMLY has won two recently and is fit as hands make horses. FOGOSO has been kidding and could surprise.

Second race—IRISH MOON gets the call in this sprint. Promises to close a lot of ground and appears capable of getting up in time. CLINGENDAAL retains a flash of class and is a threat. PORT WALES for the show end.

Third race—RUN BY has plenty of speed and seems the best suited of those gathered for this distance test. DIZZY B is a doubtful starter but will be right there if sent postward. MISS SELECTION to take care of the others.

Fourth race—TOMLUTA has been consistent this fall and deserves the top ranking in this field of good juveniles. PONY BALLET has speed and may take the place from the lightly weighted BOLA MOWLEE.

Fifth race—I'm going to take LIGHT LADY in the Selima. She has plenty of power and may take the measure of the highly regarded VAGRANCY. It is a close fit between the two. FICKLEBUSH may be better than generally rated and is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—PICTOR has done about everything asked of late and figures to take the Washington Handicap. BIG PEBBLE will close ground but the weight might hamper him. SIR ALFRED is fresh and fit.

Seventh race—CYLDE TOLSON won last out and figures to come back with another set of brackets in this field. MY BILL'S last was a bea

Capital Transit Net Leaps 52% In September

Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported net income of $145,901 in September, an increase of 52 per cent over $95,808 net in the same 1940 month. It was the best September earnings record in the transit firm's history.

Operating revenues advanced to $1,358,106 in the month, a gain of 26.5 per cent over last year. Operating expenses of $913,549 were $202,922 heavier than in September, 1940, while taxes increased 12 per cent to $115,335.

Revenue passengers carried during September totaled 19,375,800, a jump of 29 per cent over the 15,022,436 last year.

The nine-month report also showed record earnings. Net income was $857,855, up $293,546 over the same period last year. Operating revenues were $11,515,759, against $9,527,483 last year. Operating expenses totaled $7,824,687, against $6,608,099 while taxes of $1,242,343 compared with $846,001 in corresponding period of 1940.

Revenue passengers in the first nine months aggregated 164,247,052, a 20.7 per cent increase over 136,086,225 in the first three quarters of 1940.

Stores Stock Heavily

Outstanding orders of Washington department stores on September 30 were 85 per cent heavier than on the same day last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

The desire to stock up was general in the Fifth Federal Reserve District. Outstanding orders for merchandise in other cities on September 30 showed the following gains over last year: Baltimore, 82 per cent; Richmond, 62 per cent; district as a whole, 81 per cent.

At the same time the Federal Reserve Bank reported that Washington stores' collections on accounts receivable in September were rated at 29 per cent. Richmond and Baltimore stores showed collctions of 32 and 33 per cent, respectively.

Defense Housing Aid Boosted

The 409 member savings and loan associations and other thrift institutions of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem are stepping up their aid to national rearmament, especially in the financing of homes for defense workers, O. K. LaRoque, its president, reported here yesterday.

He attended a conference of the executives of the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks, which met with Government officials active in home financing and the defense program.

"Besides encouraging the construction of needed homes for workers moving into the 57 defense areas in this bank district, embracing Maryland, the District of Columbia and six Southeastern States, the member associations are making loans to provide new rental dwelling units in existing houses," Mr. LaRoque said.

"Many home owners, their earnings increased, are able to finance their own improvements. The associations are also promoting the sale of series E defense bonds in their communities. Some of the larger institutions are investing their own funds in the series F and G bonds."

Real estate sales and values are mounting generally in the district and vacant dwellings are few, he reported. Rentals remain steady with sharp increases in some localities. Savings funds continue to flow steadily into the member institutions.

Name Change, Merger Voted By Texas Corp.

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 24.—The board of directors of the Texas Corporation today changed the name of the big oil firm to the Texas Co., merging into the parent corporation its principal subsidiary, the former Texas Co.

At the same time, the board voted an extra dividend of 50 cents a share, payable December 15 to holders of record November 28, together with the regular dividend of 50 cents a share, payable January 2 to holders of record November 28.

W. S. S. Rogers, president, estimated the company's earnings for the first nine months of this year at $40,063,435, or $3.68 a share, compared with $33,692,712, or $3.10 a share, in the like 1940 period.

Rogers said the purpose of the merger was to simplify the corporate structure of the Texas organization, to promote greater efficiency and to effect economies. He said there would be no change in management, policies, the form of the company's outstanding debentures or in the manner of selling or exchanging the debentures.

However, he said, on or about November 3 the company would inform stockholders of changes to be made in stock certificates and the procedure to be followed in selling or exchanging them after that date.

Liquor Distillers To Make Alcohol For Gunpowder

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., and Schenley Distrillers Corporation, liquor makers, announced today part of their facilities will be devoted to production of industrial alcohol for use in the smokeless-powder industry.

Seagram said the Army Ordnance Department has estimated that it would require 50 million to 80 million gallons of industrial alcohol in 1942.

Seagram planned to convert 65,000 bushels of corn a month, while Schenley said it would produce 850,000 gallons of ethyl alcohol between November 1 and next January 31.

Ordinarily industrial alcohol is distilled from by-products of cane-sugar making. A scarcity of ships to transport molasses to this country from the West Indies has threatened the normal supply.

Milk Sales Gain Sizably in Month

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Milk Industry Foundation estimated today, on the basis of reports from 152 United States markets, that sales of fluid milk during September averaged 7,270,786 quarts daily, compared with an average of 6,842,332 daily in September, 1940.

The foundation said the increase was the fourteenth consecutive monthly rise in daily average milk sales.

Milk company pay rolls for September were 7.18 per cent above the 1940 month, and employment up 2 per cent, the foundation said.

Mississippi Brings in Its First Oil Well

Vicksburg, Miss., Oct. 24 (AP).—Mississippi's first oil production from the Wilcox sand was flowing from the Magnolia Petroleum Co.'s Hall No. 1 test well, 6 miles north east of Vicksburg, today.

The crude was a very heavy asphaltic fluid with a specific gravity of only 16.8, but increasing interest was being shown by oil men, who consider the Wilcox showing significant. This sand has been one of the biggest producing strata in other States.

G. E. Studies Change In Dividend Dates

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—General Electric Co. today announced directors would consider November 28 re-establishment of the concern's old custom of paying dividends, when declared, in January, April, July and October.

Dividends payable in December, one of which was declared today, were started in 1936 because of the undistributed earnings tax, no longer in effect. The contemplated change would mean no dividend payment in December, 1942.

Today's dividend was 35 cents a share, payable December 20 to stockholders of record November 14.

Jewelry Industry Faces Fight For Life; New Metals Studied

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Oct. 24.—The jewelry industry, faced with a Government order restricting its use of copper and copper alloys to 50 per cent of last year's quantity, moved today to find its "place in the economic structure."

Spokesmen said about 350,000 persons depended on wages paid by the industry, which is centered in New England, and that jewelry manufacturers found it difficult to obtain defense contracts because their machinery was too light for such work.

As the first step to prevent a slump in the industry, the New England Manufacturing Jewelers and Silversmiths Association planned to distribute a fact-finding questionnaire to manufacturers to support a request for relief from the restrictions.

"We have no right to expect business as usual, but we have courage to hope and are confident we can find our place in the economic structure," F. A. Ballou, of Providence, president of the association, said at an association meeting last night.

While exploring defense work possibilities and seeking lessened restrictions on copper and copper alloys, the manufactureres have studied suggestions ranging from the use of substitute metals to the calling in of pennies and nickels so that the metal in them might be used for manufacturing.

Asserting that widespread unemployment threatened and that there had been some job curtailment already, Edward O. Otis, executive secretary of the association, suggested that tin and cold rolled steel might be used in jewelry manufacture.

The Providence Journal-Bulletin asserted that more than eight billion 1-cent pieces, weighing about 25,000 tons, and more than two billion nickels, weighing 8000 tons, now are in circulation.

"If all of these were to be called in and coins of substitute content issued in their place—made of material such as goes into car checks and sales-tax takens—enough copper and nickel would result to keep the jewelry factories of Rhode Island and Massachusetts going full tilt for three years or more," the Journal-Bulletin said.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—An early rise in cotton futures today resulted in heavy hedge selling and profit taking which forced quotations down 13 to 21 points.

Trade and mill buying in the first hours stimulated prices as much as $1.15 a bale before demand tapered and the market turned quiet.

The bulge was attributed to carryover of demand based on yesterday's prospects for a higher loan rate on farm products.

Gray goods trading improved somewhat, although there was a tendency among mill agents toward caution in the face of the new flexible price ceilings, to spot cotton quotations.

Port receipts Thursday, 19,605 bales; port stocks, 3,307,569.

This compared with $622,345, or $1.23 a share on 459,054 shares of common, in the like months a year ago.

Steel Production Record Shattered

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—All previous anunal records for the production of steel in the United States were shattered today, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced.

Statisticians of the institute estimated that at 12:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, the industry would equal the previous one-year record of 63,981,662 net tons attained in 1940.

In the more than two months remaining of 1941, they said, the steel output for the Nation would run to 82 million tons, about equal to the production of all the rest of the world combined.

In 1939, when other nations were arming at top speed, their total output of steel was 94,400,000 tons. Aerial bombing and sabotage, however, were believed to have reduced present capacities below that record level.

Oil Supplies Climb in Week

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum at the close of the week ended October 18 totaled 243,605,000 barrels, a net increase of 34,000 barrels compared with the previous week. Stocks of domestic oil increased 551,000 barrels for the week and foreign crude increased 517,000 barrels.

Daily average production for the week was 4,111,000 barrels or an increase of 40,000 barrels compared with the previous week's level. Runs to stills averaged 4,120,000 barrels daily, compared with 4,075,000 barrels for the preceding week.

Mills Ordered to Cut Use of Waste Paper

Donald M. Nelson, Priorities Director, yesterday ordered a 10 per cent reduction in consumption of waste paper by Eastern paperboard and roofing mills between October 25 and November 22.

The order, which Nelson said was necessary because current supplies of waste paper are inadequate to meet the needs of Eastern mills, affects plants in the area east of a line from the Canadian border through and including Buffalo, N. Y., Pittsburgh and Tallahassee, Fla.

Sheet & Tube Plans To Redeem Bonds

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 24 (AP).—Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. will call $5,000,000 of its 4 per cent convertible debentures December 15, its officers announced today. The bonds are part of a $20,000,000 issue due in 1948.

The company will pay 1 per cent premium on the debentures, numbers of which will be chosen by lot.

YOU Can't Deduct New Retail Tax From Income!

The Treasury ruled yesterday that retailers, and not their customers, can deduct the new Federal retail excise taxes on furs, jewelry and toilet preparations from their income tax returns.

Most other Federal excises can be deducted only by manufacturers and in the case of the new retail levies, the Treasury followed its old rule that only the person who actually pays the tax to the Treasury can claim it as an income tax reduction, even though the consumer may eventually pay the tax through increased prices.

The decision on the retail taxes was complicated by a section of the new law effective October 1 which made it a criminal offense for a retailer to advertise that he absorbs the new taxes and does not figure them into the prices he charges.

This provision led some people to believe that Congress was making it plain that the consumer actually paid the tax, but the Treasury said it did not work that way.

A few of the Federal taxes, especially the tax on amusement tickets, are deductible by the consumer, but decision has not been made upon all the new taxes.

OPM Acts to Acquire All Available Raw Silk

The Office of Production Management acted yesterday to expedite the acquisition by the Government of all available raw silk.

Donald Nelson, OPM director of priorities, ordered that effective October 28 all persons owning title to remaining raw silk in unbroken bales inform the textile section of the OPM's purchase division by October 30 of the amount, description and location of the silk they possess.

When the information is available, holders of contracts for parachutes will be able to acquire silk they need and the defense supplies corporation will take over the remainder for additions to the Government's stock pile.

The action was a follow-up on the October 16 order prohibiting further transfer of titles to silk and giving a general preference rating to parachute manufacturers.

Encouraging Words for Oil Industry

Ralph K. Davies had some encouraging words for the oil industry this week about three of its biggest worries—prices, priorities and Federal control.

Addressing the International Petroleum Association's annual convention, the deputy petroleum coordinator had this to say about the recent clamor for oil price increases:

"Prices fall within the jurisdiction of the Office of Price Administration, but the petroleum coordinator is charged with the duty of making such recommendations to that office as he deems necessary.

"Such recommendations must of course be based upon facts and, armed with facts, the coordinator is not adverse to making recommendations as to price—even increases in price."

About priorities:

"The Office of Petroleum Coordinator will do its utmost to obtain for the industry its full share of the materials available."

About Federal control:

No control over the industry is exercised by the coordinator and it never will be "if we cooperate promptly and effectively and do the job that must be done."

Davies said the idea of altering "our whole peacetime industrial system when there is no shooting is something new to us. . . .

"The transfer of tankers to the British service brought the war's first impact upon our domestic petroleum operations. . . .

"The oil industry must now realize that it is no longer able to work normally. New and enormous demands are made upon it for the products necessary to run the machinery of defense industry. Unforeseeable expansion in military equipment creates a requirement for its products suddenly far beyond anything contemplated.

"I wonder where some of those who express doubt as to the necessity for the coordinating agency would find themselves in the absence of it?

"Before the emergency is over, I prophesy that these same people will be only too glad that there is a coordinator to preserve the competitive structure of the industry upon a just and equitable basis, with protection against monopoly and unfair advantage."

OPA Clamps Down on Another Scrap Dealer

Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced yesterday that a second violator of the iron and steel scrap price schedule had agreed to refund to purchasers all sums collected in excess of selling prices since September 2.

Henderson said the case involved a relatively small Pennsylvania dealer who admitted several violations.

As in the previous action, in which one of the Nation's largest iron and steel scrap dealers agreed to make restitution, the OPA withheld the name of the firm.

Henderson added that cases are being prepared against a number of other firms charged with violating the scrap schedule.

New Price Basis for Hides and Calf Skins

Price Administrator Leon Henderson ordered ceiling prices on hides, kips and calf skins placed on a shipping-point basis. Also, he set up a separate price list for Pacific Coast hides and abolished certain dealers' commissions.

New maximums for Coast hides will be 13½ cents a pound for steers and cows and 10 cents a pound for bulls.

Henderson declared that a change from the present basis to a shipping point basis would afford all buyers of hides and skins equal opportunity to compete for available supplies.

The decision to prohibit dealers from charging service commissions on goods sold for their own account resulted from disclosure that many dealers were charging commissions on all sales, whether or not any special service was performed for the buyer.

Meanwhile, the OPM Priorities Division ordered lead refiners to set aside 15 per cent of their November production, subject to allocation by the Government.

Priorities officials estimated the order would set aside from 6,000 to 6,500 tons of lead for allocation, in addition to the amounts allocated from supplies of Metals Reserve Company.

Metal not allocated from the priorities pool for defense uses during the month will be added to the Government's stockpile of lead.

Lakes Transit Firms' Merger Recommended

By the Associated Press

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended yesterday that the Great Lakes Transit Corporation be authorized to acquire control through stock ownership of the Minnesota-Atlantic Transit Co.

Under the proposal, which still must be acted upon by the commission, the Great Lakes company would acquire the Minnesota company's stock at its book value, and the Minnesota company would withdraw from lake service, all future operations to be conducted by the Great Lakes company.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—Given a shot in the arm by news from the legislative front in the National Capital, wheat led all other grains into higher ground today.

A quick jump of 3 cents a bushel in the first 10 minutes of trading provided most of the fireworks and from there on in the market was a dull affair, with prices receding about a cent.

Developments in Washington included clarification of yesterday's late announcement that Congressional leaders of the farm bloc planned an attempt to boost parity loan values on five basic crops to 100 per cent from the current rate of 85 per cent.

Shipments of Tires Up 18% in Month

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Rubber Manufacturers Association reported today that September shipments of automotive pneumatic casings totaled 5,264,357 units, 18 per cent above last year's September shipments, but 2.5 per cent under the August total of 5,399,702.

Production for the month was 4,583,324 units, 3.9 per cent above the 1940 month but 8.4 per cent under the 5,004,912 turned out in August.

Iron Ore Use Sets New Peak in Month

Cleveland, Oct. 24 (AP).—Daily average consumption of Lake Superior iron ore hit a new high in September at 215,917 gross tons, the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported today. It listed 6,447,539 tons of the red mineral used by furnaces during the full month.

Previous per day peak was 210,787 tons in August, 1941, when total consumption amounted to 6,534,424 tons, the record for an entire month.

The increased daily use was accounted for by the fact September was one day shorter than August.

Consumption of the raw material for the first nine months this year stood at the unprecedented top of 56,160,488 tons, compared with 44,228,922 tons in the like period last year.

Indians Rout G. W. Eleven Under Lights

thing of beauty. Masters took the ball from Freeman and behind perfect blocking scooted wide around left end for 28 yards and a touchdown.

Howard took the ball around the opposite end on a duplicate reverse play on the following set of downs and made 35 yards to the end zone as the G. W. line, which put in creditable performances in four previous games, was a leaky outfit.

The sixth and seventh touchdowns were by Howard and Red Irwin, who left smoky trails as they respectively dashed 59 and 47 yards for scores on a pass interception and blocked kick. An eighth touchdown was called back for W. and M. offsides.

Sailors Are Delighted

G. W., to the delight of the sailors in the audience, threatened twice in the second half. Paul Nugent took a kickoff on his goal line and was finally stopped after 55 yards. The next play was good for 20 yards, a pass from Budmundson to Paidokovich, but a pass interception ended the rally. Walter Fedora cut through the line for 45 yards to the 10 and finally made it to the 2 in the second half, but Warrington intercepted a pass and ran the ball out. Fedora made another 21-yard gain, but, as you may have guessed, it was all in vain.

The Colonials managed to come out of the first period with a scoreless deadlock, thanks to Stan Ziobro, who recovered Johnson's midair fumble when the fleet Indian back was apparently away for a score on the G. W. 20. Graham kicked out for the Colonials and the punt return Freeman was running hard on the G. W. 22 when John Konizewski grabbed him as he fell and prevented a score. The Virginians failed to score from there when Burnell Martinson knocked a fourth-down pass out of bounds.

G. W.'s attack was a blust in the first period. The Colonials received the ball five times on punts, lost yardage twice, gained 1 yard twice and were stymied for no gain the fifth time. Jimmy Graham hauled William and Mary's Bucher down on a would-be-touchdown run near the close of the period, but Johnson and Freeman alternated in a drive to the 2 and as the second period opened Howard went over, Johnson converting.

Young Mounts Defeat Bullis Prep, 27 to 0

By the Associated Press

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 24.—Freshmen and sophomores of Mount St. Mary's junior varsity team gave the Bullis Prep eleven, of Silver Spring, a 27-to-0 drubbing in a grid encounter today.

Mason, Mount fullback, scored first with a 25-yard run in the second quarter and paved the way for another touchdown in the third when he intercepted a Bullis pass and ran 31 yards to the 2-yard stripe.

Hodges, Sports Announcer, Hurt in Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 24.—Russ Hodges, radio sports announcer who handles broadcasts of the Washington Redskins' football games, was painfully injured last night when his car was forced from the road near here.

Hodges, alone in the vehicle, was thrown clear but landed on a sharp rock. At Presbyterian Hospital doctors said he sustained a crushed vertabra and head cuts. He will be in a cast for several weeks but it is expected he will be back in action before the close of the 'Skins' season.

Hodges, for many years associated with station WBT here, was to have joined WOL in Washington Monday to handle the afternoon "Sportspage of the Air" program and other sports broadcasts as well as the Sunday football games. WOL had planned a reception for him Monday afternoon at the Hotel Carlton.

General Manager William B. Dolph said last night that other announcers, including famed Art (Bet-a-Million) Brown, would fill in for Hodges until he is able to return.

Next Sunday's Redskin-Cleveland game, sponsored by the P. J. Nee Co. in cooperation with The Washington Post, will be handled by Lee Kirby, well-known Southern sportscaster, with the aid of Walter Haight, of The Post staff.

Kirby, a member of the WBT staff for six years, has handled most Duke and North Carolina games in that period and today will broadcast the Wake Forest-North Carolina game, leaving immediately afterward for Washington.

2 Women Tie For Golf Title At Kenwood

Mrs. Richard Thornberg and Mrs. Walter Weible, president of the District Women's Golf Association, tied for the board of governors' trophy at the Kenwood Club yesterday.

Mrs. Thornberg posted 95—20—75 and Mrs. Weible carded 92—17—75. The pair will play off the tie at a date to be announced later.

Mrs. Betty Meckley gained low gross honors with an 84 in the ladies' field day, also held yesterday. Two tied for low net, Mrs. A. A. McEntee with 86—10—76 and Mrs. Anne Dudley with 104—28—76. A three-way tie existed for second low net among Mrs. Gladys Bashore, 93—16—77; Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, 96—19—77, and Mrs. John Barron, 101—24—77.

Mrs. Louise Bullock captured low putts for the 18 holes with 31. Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg's 84 in Class A and Mrs. Marvin Wire's 76 in Class B were tops for ringer score.

Fifty-five competed, the largest since the field day's inauguration.

Fred Jacoby Leads Outboard Scoring For Fifth Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 14.—For the fifth time since 1935, Fred Jacoby, jr., of North Bergen, N. J., the Nation's leading professional outboard racer, has won the point scoring championship of the United States and the George H. Townsend Medal.

The tabulation of scoring was completed today by George W. Sutton, jr., former president of the American Power Boat Association, and showed Jacoby had amassed 18,882 points, eclipsing by more than 3000 his nearest rival, Paul Wearly, the veteran professional of Muncie, Ind., who scored 15,381.

Frank J. Desmond, of Short Hills, N. J., was the only amateur among the first half dozen scorers, placing fourth with 12,099.

Another amateur, Don Whitfield, of Upper Montclair, N. J., who confined his activities solely to the midget class, carried off two other national outboard prizes—the Charles E. Rochester Trophy for the greatest number of points won in any two classes and the Stanley W. Ferguson Diamond Medal for the best average performance among the country's 2000 outboard drivers.

It was his second winning of the Ferguson Trophy, for which he gained 17 firsts and one second in 18 races for a spectacular average of 98.6.

Farley Says Yankee Deal 'Still on Fire'

Chicago, Oct. 24 (AP).—James A. Farley, the former Postmaster General, said today the proposed deal for purchase of the world champion New York Yankees by a group he is associated with was "still on the fire" and that "if the price ever gets right, maybe we'll do business." Farley changed trains en route to Davenport, Iowa, to speak at the dedication of a new library at St. Ambrose College.

men are paid to attend school. Even the bands are subsidized. The teams should be professional, too—professional in perfection, size and brawn, with the old amateur "try" that comes naturally to them.

Good thing for the country. Good thing for the conscripts.

Billy Soose definitely will retire as world's middleweight champion of New York. The former Penn State boy now weighs 178, and it's all bone and muscle. His scheduled return match with Ken Overlin, from whom he took the title, will be cancelled.

"Billy just can't make the weight any more," one of Billy's handlers told us today. "We're not sad about that. There's a lot more action in the lightheavyweight class, and a lot more money. Billy will be a better fighter, with that extra weight and strength, and he'll certainly have many more men to fight. He's never made any real money out of boxing, but now I think he will."

Probably Be Round-Robin for Title

The title? Well, about the only thing Jacobs can do is stage a round-robin, with Tony Zale, Georgie Abrams and Overlin. I don't know what he'll do if Abrams beats Zale—for Abrams is Overlin's stablemate."

P. S.—Paul Moss, Soose's manager, will leave soon to resume his work as a Hollywood scenarist. He will turn the job of handling Soose over to Dick Powell, the Hollywood star who is now in the East, rehearsing for a Broadway show. Powell was Soose's first patron.

Lew Worsham And Thom Win Golf Tourney

Corcoran Thom, jr., and Lew Worsham, pro at Burning Tree, captured the second annual Course Stormers-Pro golf tournament yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club. Worsham posted a 70, and Thom had a 80, plus the handcap of 10, which gave the pair a net 140.

Second place went to Reeve Lewis and Mel Shorey, Indian Spring's pro, with 75 and 72, respectively, plus a handicap of 5, which gave them 142. D. J. Callahan and Al Houghton, of Beaver Dam, finished third with 97, 70—24—143.

Thom and Worsham succeed Clegett Stevens and Robert Stead as champions, the latter two having moved from Washington and were unable to defend their laurels.

A three-way tie marked the pro sweepstakes. Worsham, Houghton and Rut Coffey, of Hagerstown, all posted 70s.

Stable of French Baron on Block To Aid in Relief

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, France, Oct. 24.—The racing stable of Baron Edouard de Rothschild is being sold by order in Paris, it was announced here today. The baron is now in America. Before the sale began the two best stallions were purchased on behalf of the French government for the national studs.

Eight yearlings were offered for sale and made an aggregate of 600,000 francs. Brood mares and horses in training will be sold next week. All the proceeds will go to the national relief fund.

Trick-Shot Golfer Will Perform Here

Jack Redman, international trick-shot artist, will give an exhibition at the Indian Spring Country Club golf course tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. No admission will be charged.

De Chard to Get Plaque From Boxing Editor

Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring Magazine, long regarded as one of the most famous authorities on boxing in the world, will present Jimmy DeChard, Frankie Mann's promising heavyweight contender, with a special plaque designating the former Golden Gloves champion as the No. 1 "find" of last month, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced last night.

Menendez said Fleischer would come to town personally on Monday, November 3, to honor the Washington boy who has scored four victories in as many professional starts. DeChard is scheduled to fight in an eight-round headliner that night at Turner's Arena against Jay D. Turner, the battling Texas heavyweight.

Fleischer, says Menendez, is greatly interested in the 23-year-old DeChard, and expects to be here with a party of New York ring notables.

Abe Simon Undergoes Appendectomy in N. Y.

New York, Oct. 24 (AP).—Heavyweight Abe Simon, who underwent an appendectomy at Memorial Hospital, Jamaica, last night, was reported in good condition today.

Simon complained of pains in his side before he was knocked out by Lem Franklin Monday night in Cleveland, his manager said, and yesterday his physician ordered the operation.

Friends Bows To St. Albans In Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Oct. 24.—With Bob Bondy handling the rushing, Earle Elliott the hurling despite a broken finger and Jim Trimble the catching, St. Albans School gridders swept to their third triumph in four games here today, being Baltimore Friends, 25-7.

Bondy opened scoring with an 8-yard plunge in the first period, rested momentarily while the Elliott-to-Trimble combined clicked for a pair of 50-yard touchdowns, and then came back to score again from the 2-yard line in the third period.

With many of the Saint reserves holding forth in the final period, Friends finally scored on a 20-yard aerial, Wyskoff to Roberts. Trapmell dropkicked the extra point.

BUT IF JANE DIDN'T SEND HIM A NOTE —
IT WAS A FAKE — A FAKE! HE'S WALKED INTO A TRAP SET BY ENEMY AGENTS!
THEN WE MUST DO SOMETHING! NOT JUST STAND HERE —
WHERE IS THAT NOTE? MAYBE IT WILL TELL US WHERE HE WENT — HE TOOK IT WITH HIM — WE HAVEN'T A CLUE TO START ON!
IF HE LEFT IN A TAXI WE MAY BE ABLE TO TRACE THE CAR!
SURE — THERE'S A CAB STAND ON THE NEXT CORNER FROM THERE!
LET'S TRY ANY WAY!

SUPERMAN — Who's Foolin' Who? — BY JERRY SIEGEL and JOE SHUSTER

HE'S HERE — SUPERMAN IS HERE!
LOOK — THE WALL-SHAKING-CRASHING IN...!
WERE YOU EXPECTING ME?
I KNEW YOU'D INVESTIGATE THE PARALYSIS-ROD ROBBERIES — AND COME HERE!
THEN YOU MUST KNOW I'VE COME TO TURN YOU OVER TO THE LAW!
WAIT! LET'S TALK THIS OVER!
BE SEATED! LET'S DISCUSS THIS LIKE GENTLEMEN!
(ONCE HE SITS IN THAT CHAIR, HE'S DOOMED!)
AND SINCE WHEN ARE YOU A GENTLEMAN?

Listen! with Glynn

It's been a right honorable week that's just passed for a certain Washington-born vocalist, name of Kate Smith.

Last night on her radio show, which you heard over WJSV and the Columbia network, she was presented with an award from Harper & Brothers, the publishers, for having produced the playlet, "Kathryn Howard," on one of her previous variety hours. Called one of the ten best radio plays of the year, it was included in the just-published book by Norman Weiser, "Writer's Radio Theater."

Then it was only a few days previous, on Tuesday, that Miss Smith was singled out of all the entertainment world for the appointment to an important role for the Government in this national emergency.

In announcing Miss Smith's appointment as liaison officer between the Radio Section of the Office for Emergency Management and the field of radio, to help keep the public informed about the contribution it can make in conserving scarce materials needed for defense, Executive Director Donald Nelson declared: "The public must be clearly and fully informed if it is to make its most useful contribution. . . . The defense program has now reached the point where your assistance can be invaluable. Therefore, I hereby request you to help us carry the story of conservation to your millions of listeners."

Maneuvering Soldiers Trap Deadly Snake

St. Louis (U.P.).—The St. Louis zoo, long proud of its collection of snakes, has a new donation coming—a coral snake captured in Louisiana by two East St. Louis soldiers during Army maneuvers.

The soldiers, Curt Ulrich and Paul Anderson, both called into service with the Illinois National Guard, offered to donate their prize to the zoo. So the zoo board immediately sent a container to them to ship the snake back.

The reptile, snakehouse officials said, would be the first at the zoo. They explained coral snakes are hard to keep in captivity because they are difficult to feed and handle. Their bite causes death in from 5 to 7 minutes.

ANY MAIL THIS MORNING?
NO, NOT A THING. THAT'S THE SECOND MORNING WITHOUT A LETTER
I SAW THE POSTMAN. I THOUGHT HE CAME IN OUR GATE
I THINK HE WAS A SUBSTITUTE CARRIER. OUR REGULAR MAN IS ON VACATION
WHERE DID YOU GET ALL THAT MAIL?
IN OUR LETTER BOX. SOME OF IT HAS BEEN THERE SINCE LAST WEEK
WHAT A FOOL PLACE TO PUT LETTERS — IN A LETTER BOX
YES, OUR REGULAR POSTMAN ALWAYS THROWS IT IN THE DOORWAY

UH—BUD, DEAR—DO YOU BELIEVE IN LONG ENGAGEMENTS?? — THAT ALL DEPENDS, DEAR— — AS I RECALL IT, MY MOTHER AND FATHER WERE ENGAGED FOR FIVE YEARS AND THEY STUCK TOGETHER! — FIVE YEARS—GOSH—THAT'S A LONG, LONG TIME, ISN'T IT? — OH—I DON'T KNOW—I HAVE AN OLDER BROTHER WHO WAS ENGAGED EIGHT YEARS AND NOW HE'S HAPPILY MARRIED WITH LOTS OF KIDS! IT HAS IT'S ADVANTAGES — OH—I SEE— — —BUT I'LL BE HANGED IF I CAN SEE IT! HOW ABOUT NEXT WEEK?! — L-LET'S STOP A MOMENT, BUD DARLING—I FEEL SORTA FAINT AGAIN—
